Former New Deal Chief Admits Aid To 'Spy Ring Boss'

White Tells Probers Help Given To Save Silvermaster's Job

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—Harry Dexter White, former top New Deal official, admitted today he interceded to save the government job of Nathan Silvermaster, whose dismissal was asked on the ground that he was a Communist.

White, ex-assistant secretary of the treasury, said he helped Silvermaster, who has been named as head of a Soviet spy group, after the latter declared he was not a Communist.

Both White and Lauchlin Currie, wartime aide to the late President Roosevelt, told the House Un-American Activities Committee that they never gave government secrets to Communist spies.

The two ex-New Dealers branded as false the charges of Elizabeth Bentley that they served as "high-up contacts" for a Soviet espionage network, and denied that they were Communists or Communist sympathizers.

White acknowledged that he knew Silvermaster very well, and had visited Silvermaster's home.

SILVERMASTER, during his testimony, said he had accompanied White to the Bretton Woods monetary conference and had been assigned there to translation of Russian documents.

White said he conferred with Herbert Gaston, an assistant secretary of the treasury and loyalty board member, on Silvermaster's proposal dismissal.

The former treasury official said he knew William Ludwig Ullmann, identified by Miss Bentley as the spy ring's photographer, and that he had, in fact, asked Ullmann to take pictures of Mrs. White and the White children.

During his testimony, White revealed that in 1943 several folders containing official data were stolen from the office of the monetary research division of the Treasury department and never recovered.

He said that although the contents of the folders were "not terribly important," the Secret Service was called in immediately on the case because of wartime security requirements.

When told that Ullmann, Silvermaster and Victor Perlo have refused to tell the committee whether they are members of the Communist Party, White said he had no comment except that they were probably acting "under advice of counsel."

White, who was accused by Whittaker Chambers as well as by Miss Bentley, asserted that he "cannot recollect ever knowing Miss Bentley or Mr. Chambers."

The former treasury official said the specific charge had been made that he helped obtain key posts for espionage ring members. He denied the charge in detail.

CURRIE specifically denied that he informed espionage agents that the United States had broken a Russian code, that he intervened to save the federal job of Silvermaster, named by Miss Bentley as a spy leader, and that he disclosed "inside information" about China.

After hearing Currie's statement, Rep. Mundt, (R) S. D., commented that the former (Continued on Page Two)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 13—The Army and Navy Union took a "stern, unyielding" stand today against "any threat of aggression from the Soviet Union."

National Commander James A. Callahan, of Victor, Ia., set the theme of the 60th annual national encampment and declared:

"We did not free Europe from one tyrant in order to turn it over to another."

A conference of top Circleville officials is scheduled to be held at 8 p. m. Friday in city council chambers to discuss possible overhauling of law enforcement activities.

The conference was spurred at last meeting of Circleville city council when protests in the august chamber rang loud and long over reported ordinance violations in the city.

Marshal Tito Says Slavs Must Ignore Cominform

BELGRADE, Aug. 13—A defiant Marshal Tito warned Yugoslavs today that conditions will be "hard" because of Yugoslavia's split with the Soviet Union and the Moscow-dominated Cominform.

The Yugoslav chieftain declared that all difficulties will be overcome, and warned that Yugoslavs who support the Cominform will be purged.

Significantly, Tito made his first public comment on the split before the First Proletarian division of the Yugoslav army. Observers took his statement as evidence that there is little likelihood of a quick healing of the breach with Moscow, and as an appeal to the army for support against dissident elements.

Tito declared: "EVERY HONEST, good Communist who respects the principles of Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin cannot be against the policy of our party. It is impossible that such a Communist can believe all that is written against us these days—all the insults against us."

"All those who are in a position to see that these accusations are untrue and nevertheless continue to criticize our party line are not sane. They have bad ambitions, and they do not deserve to remain members of our party."

Yugoslav newspapers splashed Tito's speech over their front pages without giving an indication of when or where it was made.

UN Mediator Hopes For Aid For Refugees

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Aug. 13—United Nations Mediator Count Folke Bernadotte leaves for Sweden today to consider relief measures for Arab and Jewish refugees in the Holy Land.

The Swedish count indicated that he will seek relief for these people through the International Red Cross. He said the refugee problem is one of the major obstacles to a general solution to the Palestine issue.

Bernadotte indicated he would appeal to the Security Council on behalf of some 300,000 Arab refugees who left their homes in Israel.

Britain's Sir Alexander Cadogan already has laid the case before the 11-nation body is asking its support to demands that Israel allow these Arabs to return to their homes.

Jump Is Made From Consulate

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—The Russian school teacher who leaped to freedom from a Soviet consulate window yesterday charged flatly today that she had been kept prisoner in the consulate.

Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, still in a serious condition in heavily-guarded Roosevelt hospital, hurled the accusation at Soviet Vice Consul Zolt Chepurnykh in the presence of police officials standing at her bedside.

Details of the dramatic meeting between the 52-year-old widow and the vice consul were related by Detective William Dyczko, who speaks Russian himself and monitored the conversation.

Shepurnykh finally gained admittance to the room after being rebuffed not less than three times last night. He was ushered to the bedside of the teacher who defied death itself in her bid for freedom.

Dyczko, conducting the interview, asked Mrs. Kosenkina in Russian if she wanted to see the vice consul.

The fear-stricken teacher replied firmly: "I do not want to see him."

"THIS IS THE way the conversation went, according to the detective:

Q (By Dyczko relaying a direct question from Chepurnykh) Would you like to go to another hospital?

A No.

Q (Relaying another direct question from the Soviet vice consul) How do you feel?

It was at this point that the teacher spoke directly to Chepurnykh for the first time and made her climactic accusation.

She said: "I don't want to talk to you. You kept me a prisoner. You would not let me go."

The detective repeated the answer in both Russian and English so that there could be no mistake on what Mrs. Kosenkina had said. Chepurnykh confirmed his understanding of the statement, the detective said.

The whole interview lasted less than five minutes.

Police Capt. Michael J. Ledden added then that Mrs. Kosenkina had expressed a desire to see no one else.

Mrs. Kosenkina's flat charge that she had been held prisoner at the consulate hurled the lie at the consulate's previous assertions that she had not been held captive.

THE WIDOW, whose refusal to go back to Russia July 31 started an international tug-of-war for her custody, staged a comeback from the multiple fractures and other injuries sustained.

Babe's Condition Still Serious

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—There was no improvement in Babe Ruth's condition today.

The latest official hospital bulletin read: "Babe Ruth continues to run a moderately high fever and in general there is no improvement in his condition."

It was reported that the old homerun king continues to smile gamely as he fights for life.

MRS. OKSANA KOSENKINA, Russian school teacher held in the Russian consulate in New York for five days and wanted by the United States for questioning, is carried in an ambulance after she plunged from the third floor of the consulate. She was rushed to Roosevelt hospital.

4th Party's Ohio Shindig Ends In Cries Of Dismay

NEW PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 13—There was disillusionment amongst the fourth Partyites attending the "political" convention here today.

Tuscora Park echoed to cries of dismay and disappointment when the party's champion presidential nominee, Don McNeill, answered last night's nominating speech with six to run.

McNeill was the "Breakfast Club" toastmaster and White House aspirant all rolled into one when he headed his cast today in the radio show from New Philadelphia instead of Chicago.

Just before the closing minutes of the program, McNeill answered demands that he make his acceptance speech by withdrawing "just like Eisenhower."

"It wouldn't be fair," said Mc-

Neill. "What other candidate has five hours of radio a week?"

RIGHT to the last the fourth Party drive had all the color, hoopla and embellishments of a regular try for the presidency not to speak of a few original touches.

The convention broadcast featured everything from Governor Herbert to a powerhouse woman whistler.

Before McNeill withdrew, the governor publicly announced that he "saw one winner named in Philadelphia and now another in New Philadelphia."

"What about by chances?" McNeill asked the governor.

"You're in," was the reply.

The setting at the Tuscora was County seat could hardly be more serene.

Although the downtown area looked as if a well developed hurricane passed through during the night the citizenry were blithely looking forward to the fourth party "political" convention.

The McNeill appearance at nearby Canton's railroad station was greeted by Governor Herbert and his wife and a supper.

Red Teacher Made 'Mistake'

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—Former Countess Alexandra Tolstoy declared today that Mrs. Oksana Kosenkina, who escaped from the Russian consulate in New York by plunging three stories to the courtyard, "made just one mistake." She said:

"Her mistake came when she left our farm last Saturday. She didn't have to go."

It was at the White Russian camp where the school teacher was "rescued" Saturday by Soviet officials.

"When Mrs. Kosenkina jumped yesterday, this whole matter was brought into a different light," Countess Tolstoy said. "It proves she was not kidnapped by us. It proves she was not spying. It proves she was in real fear."

Samarin To Get Yank Protection

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—The United States today rejected Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's demands for return of Mikhail Samarin and all other Soviet contentions in the case of the Russian school teachers.

A State department spokesman said Ambassador to Moscow Walter Bedell Smith has informed Molotov that the United States categorically denies that it or any of its agencies participated in any illegal act in the Samarin case.

Michael J. McDermott, special assistant to Secretary of State George Marshall, said Smith had made these statements to the Soviet foreign minister when he was called to the Kremlin for a conference by Molotov yesterday.

Samarin told the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday that he renounced his Russian citizenship and feared return to the Soviet Union because of probable death or life imprisonment.

MRS. OKSANA Kosenkina, the other school teacher, who jumped from the third floor of the New York Soviet consulate yesterday, has told authorities she fears the Russian diplomats and does not wish to see them.

A formal reply to Molotov's demands unquestionably will be relayed through Smith as soon as the State department is in possession of all facts gleaned from current investigations by the FBI and New York police.

Marshall already has stated, with reference to Samarin and Mrs. Kosenkina, that all law-abiding persons in the United States will receive full protection of the government.

The fact that Molotov entered the controversy is expected to cause the State department to redouble its efforts to obtain all the facts concerning Samarin and Mrs. Kosenkina.

New York police and the FBI have been asked to provide all possible information to refute the Soviet charge that the two teachers were "abducted" with the "connivance" of U. S. authorities.

Big City Cop Stands Solidly Against Soviets

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—Police Sergeant Lester Abrahamson pushed aside the iron curtain and staged a verbal "battle" with Russian consulate officials when they attempted to eject him from the consulate.

The sergeant waged his one-man stand against the Soviets when he went to the aid of Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, whose crumpled body lay in the courtyard of the consulate following her plunge from a third floor window.

Abrahamson, the first policeman on the case, bluntly informed the Russian staff members who attempted to put him out of the place:

"This is a police case. I'm staying here."

Abrahamson stayed right there, after helping carry Mrs. Kosenkina inside.

Until Deputy Chief Inspector Conrad Rothengast and other high police officials arrived on the scene, Abrahamson refused to budge even though, he said, physical efforts were made to evict him.

ABRAHAMSON, accompanied by another policeman, climbed over an 8-foot brick wall and reached Mrs. Kosenkina as Soviet officials were trying to get her inside.

"Do you want an ambulance?" he asked.

"Yes," Mrs. Kosenkina whispered. "Yes, I do want an ambulance. I want to go to your hospital."

"This woman wants to go to a hospital," Abrahamson informed the Soviet people. "It's my duty to see her wish is carried out."

City Solons To Ponder Present Law Activities

A conference of top Circleville officials is scheduled to be held at 8 p. m. Friday in city council chambers to discuss possible overhauling of law enforcement activities.

The conference was spurred at last meeting of Circleville city council when protests in the august chamber rang loud and long over reported ordinance violations in the city.

Invitations to attend the meeting were extended to Mayor Thurman I. Miller, Safety Director John Bolender, Police Chief William F. McCrady and the civil service commission—Hoy Greeno, Vernon Hawkes and E. L. Tolbert.

The city's solons will sit in the meeting not as councilmen but as members of committees they represent. They are finance, law and claims, service, ordinances, safety, health and hospital committees.

City councilmen agreed that the meeting would serve as a "basis" for understanding between the various departments and committees serving the city.

During that meeting of council, the legislators were besieged with repeated reports of law violations both from ranking councilmen and citizens representing disgruntled groups in various sections of Circleville.

Main attacks were leveled at speeding and other traffic violations, the unhealthy condition of burning chicken feathers and refuse near homes and housing hogs within the city limits.

Chief McCrady bore the brunt of one offensive:

Councilman Edwin L. Montgomery declared:

"We have one man in charge of enforcing these laws and he is the chief of police." He continued:

"If the police don't back us up on the laws we pass then we're nothing but a bunch of impotent ordinance passers."

Councilmen privately opined it is evident that a showdown is forthcoming between the legislative and enforcement branches of the city government.

Mayor Miller declared the police could do the job expected of them if council would make provisions to add more policemen to the force. Council, on the other hand, apparently believes the job can be done with the men on hand.

A sudden thunderstorm which developed over Cleveland and spread southeastward through the state Thursday left a trail of broken greenhouse windows as hailstones pummeled the area.

Weathermen said the weird weather originated as a "local development" over Cleveland. They said conditions were "unstable," and that the hailstones were not abnormal for thundershowers this time of the year.

"A good deal of moisture in the ground from the previous day's rains was absorbed by the overhanging clouds," one observer said, "resulting in an overloading and down it came."

Damage from the hail was particularly heavy in the Cleveland and Akron districts. The weather bureau's five-day outlook follows:

Scattered showers Monday and Tuesday with total rainfall 1/4 to 1/2 inch."

tained in her three-story leap to freedom.

She was reported much better today, although still on the critical list. Her personal physician said she would be hospitalized for at least three months, and that full recovery would require another three months.

Metropolitan police entered the international tug-of-war between Russian and American authorities on the appeal of fear-stricken Mrs. Kosenkina from the hospital bed where she was taken after leaping three stories from the Soviet consulate.

Mrs. Kosenkina pleaded with Deputy Police Inspector Edward F. Mullins during moments of consciousness that she did not want to see anyone from the Russian consulate.

Chepurnykh, when advised that Mrs. Kosenkina did not want to see him or anyone else from the Russian consulate, shouted:

"I don't believe it. I'm an official of the Soviet government and I demand to see her."

Mullins said he had only questioned the Russian school teacher briefly "because of her condition." But, he said, she admitted that she made the plunge "to get out of the cage."

She had been held incommunicado at the Soviet consulate for six days after her fantastic "rescue" from a White Russian camp outside Nyack, N. Y., 25 miles from New York.

The police inspector said that while questioning her about her stay at the consul, the woman fainted many times, and that finally he decided to wait until "she is in better condition before I get some answers to many unanswered questions."

THE SHORT, plump chemistry teacher, called repeatedly for "my only friend in this country"—anti-Communist Russian Journalist Vladimir Zenzinov. When Zenzinov came to her bedside, she embraced him, smiled and kissed him.

Isaac Don Levine, author and member of the board of directors of Common Cause, an anti-Communist group, who accompanied Zenzinov, charged that Mrs. Kosenkina was "a prisoner in the consulate."

Springfield Man Fined $50 Here

Mahlon Hostetter, 63, of Springfield, Thursday was fined $50 and costs by Magistrate Oscar Root on a reckless driving affidavit filed by Jay Henry of Circleville.

Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff arrested Hostetter on Court street a short time after the incident occurred, the officer reported.

Witnesses said Hostetter drove his car onto Route 23 north of Circleville from a side road, causing one car to swerve off the highway to avoid a collision.

Lancaster Man Denies Breaking, Entering Count

A 47-year-old Lancaster man Thursday pleaded innocent to an affidavit accusing him of breaking and entering and was bound to Pickaway County grand jury under $1,000 bond.

He was identified by officials as Andrew J. Patnie. Magistrate Oscar Root remanded Patnie to the county jail in default of bond payment. The affidavit was filed by Julia E. Campbell of Orient.

She claimed in the affidavit that Patnie climbed onto her porch roof and forced his way through a screened window.

At the time of Patnie's arrest in the Campbell home, Deputy Sheriff Vern L. Pontious termed the porch-climber's antics as a "Romeo and Juliet" affair.

Deputies Pontious and Carl Radcliff were summoned to Mrs. Campbell's home by her daughter who suggested Patnie may be harming her mother, the officers said.

DEATHS and Funerals

PAUL MCCORMICK

Paul Dwight McCormick, 27-year-old Ross County bee tender, was killed Thursday night near Clarksburg when his motorcycle threw him into a roadside ditch.

Dr. Robert Oliver, Ross County coroner, said the man died of a broken neck and internal injuries.

State highway patrolmen said McCormick had been travelling toward his home near Clarksburg when the accident occurred, and failed to negotiate the sharp right hand curve on the Wickenseimer-Asbury road. The accident occurred around 10:40 p. m.

McCormick was the son of John and Bessie Nichols McCormick. He is survived, in addition to his parents, by five brothers, Gilbert and Everett of New Holland, Amos of Washington C. H., Clarice of Columbus and Harry of Springfield. He is survived also by one sister, Mrs. Warner Penrod of Washington C. H.

McCormick, a veteran of World War II, was the Ross County bee inspector, and belonged to Clarksburg Methodist church.

Funeral services are to be held in the church at 2:30 p. m. Sunday with the Rev. I. C. Wright of Amanda officiating. Burial will be in the McCormick family plot at Brown's Chapel, near Clarksburg, by direction of Kirkpatrick and Sons funeral home of New Holland.

Friends may call at the residence after 4 p. m. Saturday.

OSMER A. PETTIBONE

Osmer A. Pettibone, 83, of Harrison Township died at 9:40 a. m. Thursday in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ruth Miller of South Parsons avenue, Columbus.

A former cement contractor, he was born March 23, 1865, in Morgan County, the son of John H. and Lodie Jane Bertzell Pettibone.

His wife, the former Nellie Ballenger Pettibone, preceded him in death.

In addition to the daughter, he is survived by two sons, Carl Pettibone of Columbus and John Pettibone of Ashville; one brother, Orson Pettibone of Stockport; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Nicholson of Columbus, Mrs. Elizabeth Strouse of Ashville, and Mrs. Dorothy Koich of San Pedro, Calif.

Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. Saturday in South Bloomfield Methodist church.

The Rev. O. W. Smith will officiate. Burial will be made by the E. F. Schlegel funeral home in South Bloomfield cemetery.

Friends may call in the home of John Pettibone, Ashville, until time of the services.

The uproar died temporarily when exhausted New Philadelphians took to their beds.

The parade over the 30 miles separating New Philadelphia from Canton was a sight that left every herd of livestock along the way with an acute case of nervous prostration.

The motorcade stretched for nearly a mile along the road and as it passed, the din and dust left no doubt in the minds of many that the war was on again.

Some 25 planes swooping over the cavalcade and bombing the Fourth Party with tons of confetti did nothing to dispel the effect.

In New Philadelphia the scene took on the appearance of a revolution. Torch parades wound in and out among the downtown street. There were campaign speeches from the City Hall porch. And McNeill was handed a gold key to the city.

Club To Receive Report On Park

Circleville Kiwanians Monday evening are to hear a detailed report on the playground program they have been sponsoring all Summer.

Backers of the organized play periods at Ted Lewis Park which has handled about 100 youngsters daily, the club will hear John Heiskell, chairman of the club's boys and girls committee; James Kirkpatrick, playground supervisor; James Callahan, president of the night softball league; and probably Pickaway County Juvenile Judge Sterling Lamb.

600 Spectators Turn Out To See Model Aircraft

About 600 spectators turned out at Ted Lewis Park to see the miniature air show sponsored by Circleville Kiwanis Club Thursday evening.

Although only two of the four models on hand were able to zoom off into the air (motor trouble had grounded the other two), spectators were satisfied in that they saw their first model jet-propelled plane put through its paces.

The jet plane, handled by Edward Fischer of Chillicothe, travelled around a 350-foot arc in the park diamond at a speed estimated at between 125-135 miles per hour.

During the second hop of the ship, lights were cut off so that spectators might see the burst of flame extending behind the tail assembly.

Fischer, who assembled models flown at the show, held a huddle with many Circleville onlookers after the demonstration to answer questions and explain how he got started on the model building hobby.

Woman, 52, Recovering After Leap

tained in her three-story leap to freedom.

She was reported much better today, although still on the critical list. Her personal physician said she would be hospitalized for at least three months, and that full recovery would require another three months.

Metropolitan police entered the international tug-of-war between Russian and American authorities on the appeal of fear-stricken Mrs. Kosenkina from the hospital bed where she was taken after leaping three stories from the Soviet consulate.

Mrs. Kosenkina pleaded with Deputy Police Inspector Edward F. Mullins during moments of consciousness that she did not want to see anyone from the Russian consulate.

Chepurnykh, when advised that Mrs. Kosenkina did not want to see him or anyone else from the Russian consulate, shouted:

"I don't believe it. I'm an official of the Soviet government and I demand to see her."

Mullins said he had only questioned the Russian school teacher briefly "because of her condition." But, he said, she admitted that she made the plunge "to get out of the cage."

She had been held incommunicado at the Soviet consulate for six days after her fantastic "rescue" from a White Russian camp outside Nyack, N. Y., 25 miles north of New York.

The police inspector said that while questioning her about her stay at the consul, the woman fainted many times, and that finally he decided to wait until "she is in better condition before I get some answers to many unanswered questions."

THE SHORT, plump chemistry teacher, called repeatedly for "my only friend in this country"—anti-Communist Russian Journalist Vladimir Zenzinov. When Zenzinov came to her bedside, she embraced him, smiled and kissed him.

Isaac Don Levine, author and member of the board of directors of Common Cause, an anti-Communist group, who accompanied Zenzinov, charged that Mrs. Kosenkina was "a prisoner in the consulate."

NEUROTIC AND FRUSTRATED

Questions, Answers Make Correspondents Wonder

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—Miss Elizabeth Bentley, a vowed former Red spy, was pink and getting pinker. Her eyes were flashing, her lips were tightening, and she could hardly sit still. But she had to, for someone else was on the witness stand before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

In fact, three witnesses paraded to the stand while she remained in that somewhat upset condition. It was what they were saying that was keeping the ex-Red spy queen's face red.

One by one, three young men whom she had accused of either being Communists or else giving important American secrets to the Communies were stating their answers to her charges. For the most part they categorically denied what she said—except for admitting that they knew her. Then they told what they thought of her.

One said she was a neurotic nuisance and a pest. Another said he and his wife practically had to lock the front door and pretend they weren't home to keep her out of their hair. Then, he said, she broke down and almost went into hysterics when they finally had to come right out and tell her to leave them alone.

THE THIRD young man said quite frankly that he considered Miss Bentley a neurotic, frustrated spinster who drank too much!

While she breathed furiously behind him, he told the committee that he had had a heck of a time shaking her, but that he finally did because she was embarrassing him by following him around and then showing up half-crocked wherever he went. By this time, the unchivalrous crowd was openly chuckling and Miss Bentley was practically waiting to explode to reporters after the hearing ended for the day.

"Those men," she said angrily, referring to the three whom she had accused of being Communists, traitors, spies or worse, "are just using an old Communist tactic—character assassination!"

Probably the bar associations will boycott correspondents for such hersey, but many of them wonder if it's wise to get a lawyer after all. . . particularly after listening to various witnesses appearing before the Un-American committee unaccompanied by attorneys, and then listening to those who bring their legal advice along.

Maybe there's rhyme and reason to it that doesn't meet the layman's eye, but the latter have come up with some mighty silly answers to committee questions—after getting the nod from their attorneys.

YOU EXPECT men to stand on their constitutional rights, but you hardly expect acrobatics from that position, and some of them seemed to do so.

On the grounds that it "might incriminate" them, various witnesses refused to say, (1) whether they belonged to the American Legion, (2) whether they had ever visited Washington, (3) whether they ever talked about the war in 1943 and 1944!

There were times, however, when correspondents covering the case agreed that some of the questions asked were on a par with some of the answers received.

In the case of one witness who was accused only of being a dupe of Communists who engaged him in casual conversation, the question went something like this: "Did you ever meet a man named Carl in 1934 or 1935?"

Any person who tries to remember the names of people to whom he was introduced at some party more than 10 years ago can sympathize with the witness—who presumably would be incriminated whether he answered yes or no or said he didn't remember!

Gas Company Starts Safety Month Campaign

"Vote the Safety Ticket" is the 16th annual August No Accident Campaign being conducted by the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., among all its employees.

The annual campaign sparks the company's year-round program for prevention of "on the job" and "at home" accidents, it was stated by Dan McClain, local manager.

In the last 12 years, Ohio Fuel has won first place eight times and second place 4 times in the contest conducted by the National Safety Council among large gas utilities in the United States.

During this month's campaign, a series of five cards is being mailed to each employee at his home. Each worker also has been given a pencil with a pocket clip bearing the safety slogan. Other reminders include placards on bulletin boards, gummed labels, letterheads, and booklets on safe driving, McClain said.

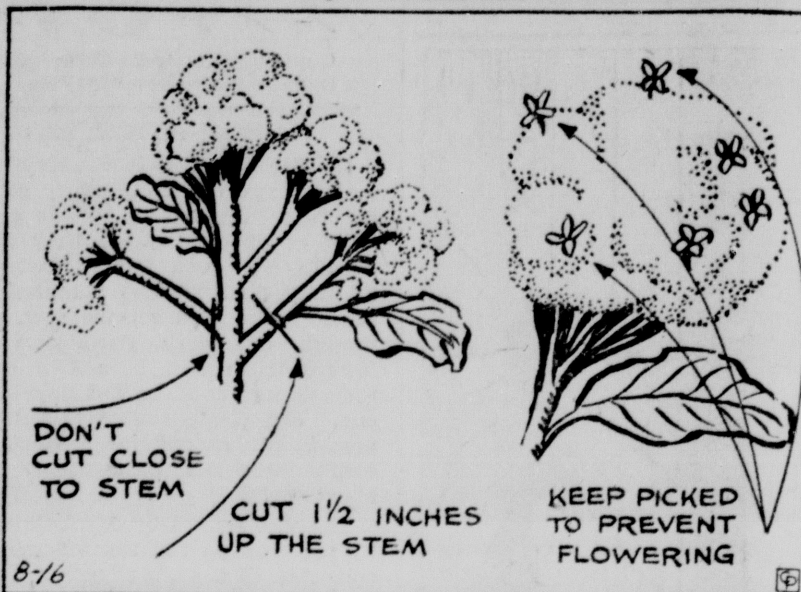

Murder Suspects Sent To Newport

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 13—Two men arrested in Charlotte were to be turned over today to Newport, Ky., authorities to face charges of the robbery-murder of an Illinois industrialist.

The prisoners, Raymond White, 27, of Middletown, and Ervin Turvey, 27, of Colon, Mich., are charged with shooting Avery L. Hack of Alton, Ill., and robbing him of $4,000.

Broccoli Keeps Coming If You Keep Cutting

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Distributed by Central Press Association

BROCCOLI is almost what the doctor ordered for good health. It is so vitamin-rich, that one serving, garden fresh, gives you four-fifths of all the vitamin A you normally need for a day, two-thirds of the vitamin C, and good amounts of riboflavin, calcium, phosphorus and iron.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, the heads of broccoli are really green flower buds which finally open into tiny yellow flowers. To keep broccoli growing and producing as it should for the table, the heads should be cut off before they reach the flowering stage. This also seems to be a good means of keeping aphid under control.

When cutting off the broccoli heads, do not cut them close to the main stem but about 1 1/2 inches up the side stem as shown in the Garden-Graph. This helps to keep the broccoli heads coming.

Aphid or plant lice can quickly ruin broccoli plants, as the dense clusters of whitish-green lice suck the life juices from the leaves. The afflicted leaves curl, wilt and die. The plants, if they live, are usually dwarfed and form only small heads. To control aphid use a nicotine spray or dust the plants with rotenone.

Broccoli will withstand light frost, and under good growing conditions you can expect to cut 20 delicious green heads from each 20 feet of row. The side heads, which will develop after the center heads are cut, are also fine in flavor.

A feeding of fertilizer will help if it is given just as the heads of broccoli begin to develop.

Robber Of Dead Begins Sentence

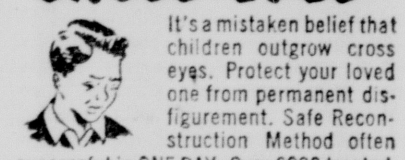

TOLEDO, Aug. 13—Roy Meader, 24, former orderly at the Robinwood hospital in Toledo, started a one to seven year sentence today in the Ohio penitentiary.

Meader was sentenced after pleading guilty yesterday in Lucas County common pleas court to stealing a ring from the dead body of Mrs. Estelle Campbell, a patient at the Robinwood hospital.

Judge John W. Hackett, in pronouncing sentence, declared: "You deserve all the punishment the court can give you as you have no respect for the living or the dead and, if possible, I will see that you serve the entire sentence."

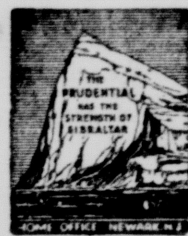

ment the court can give you as you have no respect for the living or the dead and, if possible, I will see that you serve the entire sentence."

The cold war in Germany and the Big Four negotiations in Moscow tend to obscure the hot war between East and West being fought in the Far East.

That war extends from Korea, Japan and China down through the rich areas of French Indo China, Malaya, Burma and the Dutch East Indies.

Britain has been forced to send military reinforcements into Malaya to cope with widespread Communist guerrilla warriors who have been wiping out planters trying to restore the flow of trade vital to Europe.

In Indo-China the French are pouring out millions of dollars and using thousands of troops against the natives. This costly war has been going on steadily ever since Japan surrendered.

American policymakers have their hands full in China, where an exhausting civil war between Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalists and the northern Communists staggers on.

GEN. MACARTHUR'S reform measures in Japan are under constant attack by Russia. This is the one occupied Axis nation, however, where Russia thus far has not gained a firm foothold.

If the prospect of an early peace treaty for Germany is dim it is even more so in the Far East, where the United States also labors to ease the occupation burden on the American taxpayer and to knit Oriental trade into the healing intentions of the Marshall aid plan for Europe.

The Netherlands does not appear to be able to come to terms with the Indonesian Nationalists who recently accused the Dutch of clamping a trade blockade on them in an effort to perpetuate Dutch rule.

The United Nations has been trying for many months to settle this postwar clash.

And the Indo-Chinese warfare against French rule on the other side of the world is putting an immense drain on French economy.

The revolt that broke out after

Japan capitulated was led by the Viet Namee natives. Their leader, Ho Chi Minh, a veteran Nationalist, once studied in Moscow, and is believed to be a Communist.

It is estimated that the Viet Namee forces control at least 75 percent of the country. They paralyze traffic. Hundreds of persons have been killed in raids on road convoys by these nationalists who demand self-rule.

Gas Company Starts Safety Month Campaign

"Vote the Safety Ticket" is the 16th annual August No Accident Campaign being conducted by the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., among all its employees.

The annual campaign sparks the company's year-round program for prevention of "on the job" and "at home" accidents, it was stated by Dan McClain, local manager.

HUNGER IN GERMANY

RECENT developments have led to the conclusion that food problems in the Russian zone of Germany are more acute than elsewhere. There have been reports of hunger demonstrations, and Soviet announcements of severe measures against hoarders and black market sellers. Almost nowhere in central Europe is food plentiful, but in the other zones of Germany the occupying powers have been able generally to keep food supplies at a level sufficient to prevent mass unrest.

There are further small indications which make it easy to believe that the Russians have deliberately created a shortage of food in their zone. Germans in that zone are told that if they want more to eat they must produce more.

The use of hunger as a club in the exploitation of labor usually results in an accumulation of emaciated workers who no longer have the strength or health to do any useful work. New workers must be moved in continuously to replace the ill and starved, or the stamina and productivity of the whole area decline.

If Russia is deliberately creating hunger in its zone of Germany, what is the aim? Is it to reduce the German population to irreparable weakness, or to make way for more faithful Communists to move in? Or is it just short-sighted?

PRICE CUTTING

THE NEW YORK Times recently reported that wholesale and retail distributors of television sets in its city are concerned over price cutting by some independent retailers. The Times quotes representatives of three well-known makers of radio equipment as saying that their sets are supposed to be placed on the retail market at fixed prices, and that everyone is unhappy because some retailers are willing to reduce their margin of profit in order to sell to the public at lower prices.

The wholesale representatives said that in reprisal sales franchises will be cancelled for dealers who cut prices, and no more sets will be sold to them.

Is this the fruit of the much-vaunted free enterprise system?

We'll wager if ten drivers chosen at random were asked to explain the purpose of the white lines painted across traffic lanes at intersections protected by signals or "stop" signs, all ten would miss the answer.

NEW YORK—My cousin Gregory is 19 and he is going to be an actor. Ordinarily this would be of interest to a few well-chosen relatives, greasepaint manufacturers trying to build up a sucker list, and no one else at all.

As a matter of fact, even the relatives will be losing some of their polite interest when this cold fall comes along, since Gregory, unless he is man enough and valiant enough to take an icepick and puncture his eardrum, is going to be in the United States Army. There will be, thus, a slight interruption in his campaign to make the populace forget John Barrymore.

For several months, however, I have been on the prowl for some young soul who:

(1)—Is taking the first uncertain steps in the direction of the stage.

(2)—Is appearing in summer stock.

My cousin Gregory fills both bills and so I think his information and comments may make a column involving those subjects. Actually, it is just as if I were finding out all about it from a bright young stranger, since to the best of my knowledge I never had seen Gregory until the other morning.

Most of the Heimers appear to be given to frequent visits to uncles and aunts, but I am the exception; I am the anti-social black sheep to whom most of my relatives are vague, cloudy figures, remembered only dimly from my youth and undoubtedly a good deal fatter, older and more crochety than I recall them.

It appears that the germ enters your blood-stream in high school. My cousin Gregory went to school over in Maywood, N. J., and somewhere near the end of his school days he turned up in a couple of undergraduate plays and found out he could make his fellow juveniles laugh.

TO MAKE WITH THE FOOLISHNESS when you are young and then to hear a roar of laughter is a needy thing. The next thing you know school was over and Gregory was entered in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

When you finish the two-year course here you usually are con-

These Days

The American political parties recognize the rights of individuals to opinions and judgments of their own. This was made amply clear at both the Republican and Democratic conventions at which direct attacks were made upon the party leadership. As a matter of fact, both parties, in convention, were fruitful in factionalism, which is regarded as wholesome because it is indicative of independence of view.

To contrast, I cite the Communist Party of this country, which received a report from Bob Klonsky, organizational secretary of Eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware, on the expulsion of a faction led by Francis Franklin. It seems that Franklin had ideas of his own, which no Communist may have unless he is so authorized by those who control the party. Franklin is described as a "petty-bourgeois renegade," also as a "petty-bourgeois opportunist." His crime is described as "an organized struggle against the main line and policies of our party, conducted under the ideological leadership of Franklin and other anti-party groupings, which if permitted to develop, would destroy the party."

Franklin is accused of having committed this heinous offense:

"In the course of the pre-convention discussion in his club to defend his 'right' as a party member to attack the present leadership and present as part of pre-convention discussion what he called 'basic and fundamental disagreements with the party line,' as a 'right' guaranteed him by the party constitution."

He also did this:

"A refusal to contribute to the fighting fund against the Mundt Bill on the ground that 'the party was crying wolf in order to raise the funds.'"

After Franklin and his associates were expelled from the party, "they proceeded to organize within the party a factional struggle against the expulsion on the grounds that it was a 'violation' of 'legal and constitutional rights.' " That is considered to be a crime.

In a word, freedom of thought, freedom of choice, freedom of expression are absolutely forbidden. Criticism of the leadership of the party is absolutely forbidden. "Unrestricted discussion" and the "rights of minority opinion" are forbidden. This is in the United States of America, not somewhere in the Balkans.

This report by Klonsky is an official document which lays down the party line to be followed by all members. It is important to note that while Communists stand on their Constitutional rights as citizens of the United States, they reject constitutional rights for members of their party. While as citizens of the United States, they make a tremendous do-do about minority rights, they reject minority rights within their own party. While as citizens of the United States, they demand freedom of speech, of the press, of conscience, of opinion, within their own party, they insist on obedience to a stated and recognized line.

Whereas as citizens of the United States, they demand and insist upon their constitutional right to renounce, smear, criticize everyone including the President, the supreme court and Congress, they deny to their own members the right even to criticize the leadership of their party.

Fighting a Dread Disease

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

A VERY hopeful clue to the nature of one of the most mysterious of all diseases has been discovered during the past year. This disease is the dread multiple sclerosis. Known as a great deal of its effects—the scattered but slowly progressive degeneration of the tissues of the nervous system, reflected in a variety of symptoms such as interference with speech, vision, and muscular movements—we still had no notion of its cause.

Recently, however, the theory has been advanced that at least a part of this disastrous destruction of nerve tissue may be due to spasm of the blood vessels through which it is fed. Spasm of the blood vessels always cuts down the blood supply and, in multiple sclerosis, it is supposed that circulation is restricted to the point where death of the tissue takes place.

Better Treatment

Like every good medical idea, this one is now paying off in better treatment. A new drug, called tetra-ethyl-ammonium chloride, which has the property of relieving blood vessel spasm, has been given to a number of patients with multiple sclerosis. Though not conclusive, results are promising.

Immediately after the drug is given, there is a drop in the blood pressure and some disturbances of the vision. Hence, the patient should remain lying down for about an hour after the treatment to prevent fainting and dizziness.

Double Vision

Fourteen patients with symptoms of multiple sclerosis, such as double vision, numbness, tingling, weakness of the arms and legs, and pain in the joints, were treated with this preparation. The treatment, it would seem, protected these patients from further progress of the symptoms.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

SHEPHERD'S COURT, Mayfair, was a large block of luxury service flats. Unharmful by the ravages of enemy action, they had nevertheless been unable to keep up quite their pre-war standard of ease. There was service still, although not very good service. Where there had been two uniformed porters there was now only one. The Restaurant still served meals, but except for breakfast, meals were not sent up to the apartments.

The flat rented by Mrs. Gordon Cloade was on the third floor. It consisted of a sitting-room with a built-in cocktail bar, two bedrooms with built-in cupboards, and a superbly appointed bathroom, gleaming with tiles and chromium.

In the sitting room David Hunter was striding up and down whilst Rosaleen sat on a big square-ended settee watching him. She looked pale and frightened.

"Blackmail!" he muttered. "Blackmail! My God, am I the kind of man to let myself be blackmailed?"

She shook her head, bewildered, troubled.

"If I knew," David was saying. "If I only knew!"

From Rosaleen there came a small miserable sob.

He went on:

"It's this working in the dark—working blindfold—" He wheeled round suddenly. "You took those emeralds round to Bond Street to old Greator?"

"Yes."

"How much?"

Rosaleen's voice was stricken as she said:

"Four thousand. Four thousand pounds. He said if I didn't sell them they ought to be reinsurance."

"Yes—precious stones have doubled in value. Oh, well, we can raise the money. But if we do, it's only the beginning—it means being led to death—led, Rosaleen, led white!"

She cried:

"Oh let's leave England—let's get away—couldn't we go to Ireland—America—somewhere?"

He turned and looked at her.

"You're not a fighter, are you, Rosaleen? Cut and run is your motto."

She walked: "We're wrong—all this has been wrong—very wicked."

"Don't turn plous on me just now! I can't stand it. We were sitting pretty, Rosaleen. For the first time in my life, I was sitting pretty—and I'm not going to let it all go, do you hear? If only it wasn't this cursed fighting in the dark. You understand, don't you, that the whole thing may be bluff—nothing but bluff. Under-hay's probably safely buried in Africa as we've always thought he was."

She shivered.

"Don't, David. You make me afraid."

He looked at her, saw the panic in her face, and at once his manner changed. He came over to her, sat down, took her cold hands in his.

"Hoping you won't be angry with me, but I really do think you ought to know what's going on."

Yours ever,
Beatrice Lippincott.

Rosaleen stared down at this missive, his mind afire with speculation. What on earth was all this about? Good old Bee. He'd known Beatrice all his life. Bought tobacco from her father's shop and

"You're not to worry," he said. "Leave it all to me—and do as I tell you. You can manage that, can't you? Just do exactly as I tell you."

"I always do, David."

He laughed. "Yes, you always do. We'll snap out of this, never you fear. I'll find a way of scotching Mr. Enoch Arden."

"Wasn't there a poem, David—something about a man coming back—"

"Yes." He cut her short. "That's just what worries me. . . . But I'll get to the bottom of things, never you fear."

She said:

"It's Tuesday night you—take him the money?"

He nodded.

"Five thousand. I'll tell him I can't raise the rest all at once. But I must stop him going to the Cloades. I think that was only a threat, but I can't be sure."

He stopped, his eyes became dreamy, far away. Behind them his mind worked, considering and rejecting possibilities.

Then he laughed. It was a gay reckless laugh. There were men, now dead, who would have recognized it. . . .

It was the laugh of a man going into action on a hazardous and dangerous enterprise. There was enjoyment in it and defiance.

"I can trust you, Rosaleen," he said. "Thank goodness I can trust you absolutely!"

"Trust me?" She raised her big inquiring eyes. "To do what?"

He smiled again.

"To do exactly as you are told. That's the secret, Rosaleen, of a successful operation."

He laughed.

"Operation Enoch Arden."

Rosaleen opened the big mauve envelope with some surprise. Who on earth, he wondered, could be writing to him, using that kind of stationery—and how did they manage to get it, anyway. These fancy lines had surely gone right out during the war.

"Dear Mr. Rowley," (he read) "I hope you won't think I'm taking a liberty in writing to you this way, but if you'll excuse me, I do think there are things going on that you ought to know about."

He noted the emphasized words with a puzzled look.

"Arising out of our conversation the other evening when you came in asking about a certain person. If you could call in at the Stag I'd be very glad to tell you all about it. We've all of us felt down here what a wicked shame it was about your Uncle dying and his money going the way it did."

"Hoping you won't be angry with me, but I really do think you ought to know what's going on."

Yours ever,
Beatrice Lippincott.

Rosaleen stared down at this missive, his mind afire with speculation. What on earth was all this about? Good old Bee. He'd known Beatrice all his life. Bought tobacco from her father's shop and passed the time of day with her behind the counter. She'd been a good-looking girl. He remembered as a child hearing rumors about her during an absence of hers from Warrmsley Vale. She'd been away about a year and everybody said she'd gone away to have a baby. Perhaps she had, perhaps she hadn't. But she was certainly highly respectable and refined nowadays. Plenty of back chat and giggles but an almost painful propriety.

Rowley glanced up at the clock. He'd go along to the Stag right away. Heck with all those forms. He wanted to know what it was that Beatrice was so anxious to tell him.

It was a little after eight when he pushed open the door of the Saloon bar. There were the usual greetings, nods of the head, "Evening, sir." Rowley edged up to the bar and asked for a Guinness. Beatrice beamed upon him.

"Glad to see you, Mr. Rowley." "Evening, Beatrice. Thanks for your note."

She gave him a quick glance. "I'll be with you in a minute, Mr. Rowley."

He nodded—and drank his pint meditatively whilst he watched Beatrice dash serving out. She called over her shoulder and presented the girl Lily came in to relieve her. Beatrice murmured, "If you'll come with me, Mr. Rowley?"

She led him along a passage and in through a door marked Private. Inside it was very small and overfurnished with plush armchairs, a blaring radio, a lot of china ornaments and a rather battered-looking pierrot doll thrown across the back of a chair.

Beatrice Lippincott turned off the radio and indicated a plush armchair.

"I'm ever so glad you came up, Mr. Rowley, and I hope you didn't mind my writing to you—but I've been turning it over in my mind all over the weekend—and as I said I really felt you ought to know what's going on."

She was looking happy and important, clearly pleased with herself.

Rowley asked with mild curiosity: "What is going on?"

"Well, Mr. Rowley, you know the gentleman who's staying here—Mr. Arden, the one you came and asked about."

"Yes?"

"It was the very next evening. Mr. Hunter came along and asked for him."

"Mr. Hunter?"

Rowley sat up interestedly.

"Yes, Mr. Rowley. No. 5, I said, and Mr. Hunter nodded and went straight up. I was surprised I must say for this Mr. Arden hadn't said he knew anyone in Warrmsley Vale and I'd kind of taken it for granted he was a stranger here and didn't know anyone in the place. Very out of temper Mr. Hunter looked, as though something had happened to upset him but of course I didn't make anything of it then."

JOB UPON A TIME

Conrad Nagel, screen, stage and radio star, decided he wanted to be an actor, although his parents planned a musical career for him. Conrad was born in Keokuk, Ia., majored in public speaking at the University of Iowa and became a member of a Des Moines stock company. Nagel served in the United States Navy during World War I, and made his first film in 1919, becoming one of Hollywood's favorite stars. He made the transition from silent films to talkies successfully. In 1933 he returned to the stage, alternating with screen roles. For the last dozen years he has also directed and narrated radio dramatic programs.

As an apprentice acrobat in a circus, Hollywood actor Burt Lancaster jumped from small town to small town, earning board, room and three dollars a week. Burt is a native New Yorker, and after his circus experience, toured in vaudeville. During World War II Burt was in Army Special Service in Italy and North Africa. He has been on the screen since 1945 in The Killers, Desert Town, Brute Force, and others.

HUNGER IN GERMANY

RECENT developments have led to the conclusion that food problems in the Russian zone of Germany are more acute than elsewhere. There have been reports of hunger demonstrations, and Soviet announcements of severe measures against hoarders and black market sellers. Almost nowhere in central Europe is food plentiful, but in the other zones of Germany the occupying powers have been able generally to keep food supplies at a level sufficient to prevent mass unrest.

There are further small indications which make it easy to believe that the Russians have deliberately created a shortage of food in their zone. Germans in that zone are told that if they want more to eat they must produce more.

The use of hunger as a club in the exploitation of labor usually results in an accumulation of emaciated workers who no longer have the strength or health to do any useful work. New workers must be moved in continuously to replace the ill and starved, or the stamina and productivity of the whole area decline.

If Russia is deliberately creating hunger in its zone of Germany, what is the aim? Is it to reduce the German population to irreparable weakness, or to make way for more faithful Communists to move in? Or is it just short-sighted?

PRICE CUTTING

THE NEW YORK Times recently reported that wholesale and retail distributors of television sets in its city are concerned over price cutting by some independent retailers. The Times quotes representatives of three well-known makers of radio equipment as saying that their sets are supposed to be placed on the retail market at fixed prices, and that everyone is unhappy because some retailers are willing to reduce their margin of profit in order to sell to the public at lower prices.

The wholesale representatives said that in reprisal sales franchises will be cancelled for dealers who cut prices, and no more sets will be sold to them.

Is this the fruit of the much-vaunted free enterprise system?

We'll wager if ten drivers chosen at random were asked to explain the purpose of the white lines painted across traffic lanes at intersections protected by signals or "stop" signs, all ten would miss the answer.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The American political parties recognize the rights of individuals to opinions and judgments of their own. This was made amply clear at both the Republican and Democratic conventions at which direct attacks were made upon the party leadership. As a matter of fact, both parties, in convention, were fruitful in factionalism, which is regarded as wholesome because it is indicative of independence of view.

To contrast, I cite the Communist Party of this country, which received a report from Bob Klonsky, organizational secretary of Eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware, on the expulsion of a faction led by Francis Franklin. It seems that Franklin had ideas of his own, which no Communist may have unless he is so authorized by those who control the party. Franklin is described as a "petty-bourgeois renegade," also as a "petty-bourgeois opportunist." His crime is described as "an organized struggle against the main line and policies of our party, conducted under the ideological leadership of Franklin and other anti-party groupings, which if permitted to develop, would destroy the party."

Franklin is accused of having committed this heinous offense:

"In the course of the pre-convention discussion in his club to defend his 'right' as a party member to attack the present leadership and present as part of pre-convention discussion what he called 'basic and fundamental disagreements with the party line,' as a 'right' guaranteed him by the party constitution."

He also did this:

"A refusal to contribute to the fighting fund against the Mundt Bill on the ground that 'the party was crying wolf in order to raise the funds.'"

After Franklin and his associates were expelled from the party, "they proceeded to organize within the party a factional struggle against the expulsion on the grounds that it was a 'violation' of 'legal and constitutional rights.' That is considered to be a crime.

In a word, freedom of thought, freedom of choice, freedom of expression are absolutely forbidden. Criticism of the leadership of the party is absolutely forbidden. "Unrestricted discussion" and the "rights of minority opinion" are forbidden. This is in the United States of America, not somewhere in the Balkans.

This report by Klonsky is an official document which lays down the party line to be followed by all members. It is important to note that while Communists stand on their Constitutional rights as citizens of the United States, they reject constitutional rights for members of their party. Fighting a Dread Disease

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

A VERY hopeful clue to the nature of one of the most mysterious of all diseases has been discovered during the past year. This disease is the dread multiple sclerosis. Knowing a great deal of its effects—the scattered but slowly progressive degeneration of the tissues of the nervous system, reflected in a variety of symptoms such as interference with speech, vision, and muscular movements—we still had no notion of its cause.

Spasm of the blood vessels always cuts down the blood supply and, in multiple sclerosis, it is supposed that circulation is restricted to the point where death of the tissue takes place.

Like every good medical idea, this one is now paying off in better treatment. A new drug, called tetra-ethyl-ammonium chloride, which has the property of relieving blood vessel spasm, has been given to a number of patients with multiple sclerosis. Though not conclusive, results are promising.

Immediately after the drug is given, there is a drop in the blood pressure and some disturbance of the vision. Hence, the patient should remain lying down for about an hour after the treatment to prevent fainting and dizziness.

Double Vision

Fourteen patients with symptoms of multiple sclerosis, such as double vision, numbness, tingling, weakness of the arms and legs, and pain in the joints, were treated with this preparation. The treatment, it would seem, protected these patients from further progress of the symptoms.

or from relapses in the disease. The longest period of freedom from the symptoms was five months.

It would seem significant that all of the fourteen patients with acute symptoms began to show definite improvement within four days after the treatment was started. None of the patients became worse after the tetra-ethyl-ammonium chloride had been given to them.

Acute Symptoms

It would appear that the acute symptoms of multiple sclerosis responded to this treatment. The symptoms which had been present for six months or more prior to the time treatment was started were not altered. Hence, if this type of treatment is to be used, early diagnosis of the disease is of great importance.

Of course, the number of patients thus far treated is still too small to make any exact statement about what may be expected from the new treatment. Experience with it, however, does suggest that the acute symptoms of multiple sclerosis and symptoms which have recently developed may be modified by the use of this drug. Dr. Herman Kabat has had success in helping patients with multiple sclerosis with such drugs as neostigmine.

It goes without saying that before the exact value of any drug can be determined, many patients will have to be treated. Just the same, early results indicate that medicine is at long last on the right track in its efforts to conquer a disease which has long defied it.

It was a little after eight when he pushed open the door of the Saloon bar. There were the usual greetings, nods of the head, "Evening, sir." Rosaleen edged up to the bar and asked for a Guinness. Beatrice beamed upon him.

"Glad to see you, Mr. Rosaleen."

"Evening, Beatrice. Thanks for your note."

She gave him a quick glance.

"I'll be with you in a minute, Mr. Rosaleen."

He nodded—and drank his pint meditatively whilst he watched Beatrice finish serving out. She called over her shoulder and presently the girl came in to relieve her. Beatrice murmured, "If you'll come with me, Mr. Rosaleen?"

She led him along a passage and he pushed open a door marked Private. Inside it was very small and overfurnished with plush armchairs, a blaring radio, a lot of china ornaments and a rather battered-looking pierrot doll thrown across the back of a chair.

Beatrice Lippincott turned off the radio and indicated a plush armchair.

"I'm ever so glad you came up, Mr. Rosaleen, and I hope you didn't mind my writing to you—but I've been turning it over in my mind all over the weekend—and I said I really felt you ought to know what's going on."

She was looking happy and important, clearly pleased with herself.

Rosaleen asked with mild curiosity:

"What is going on?"

"Well, Mr. Rosaleen, you know the gentleman who's staying here—Mr. Arden, the one you came and asked about."

"Yes."

"It was the very next evening. Mr. Hunter came along and asked for him."

"Mr. Hunter?"

Rosaleen sat up interestedly.

"Yes, Mr. Rosaleen. No. 5, I said, and Mr. Hunter nodded and went straight up. I was surprised I must say for this Mr. Arden hadn't said he knew anyone in Warmley Vale and I'd kind of taken it for granted he was a stranger here and didn't know anyone in the place. Very out of temper Mr. Hunter looked, as though something had happened to upset him but of course I didn't make anything of it then."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Alfred J. Hitchcock, motion picture director; Regis Toomey, film actor, and Ben Hogan, golf star, have birthdays on Aug. 13.

YOUR FUTURE

This can be a very lucky day for you, even if it is usually thought of as bad luck Friday. It's a good time for festivities. Next year act pushy on your own intuitions. Push business to the utmost; settle outstanding problems. This period favors law, property, travel, service and rather secret matters, also romance.

JOBS UPON A TIME

Conrad Nagel, screen, stage and radio star, decided he wanted to be an actor, although his parents planned a musical career for him. Conrad was born in Keokuk, Ia., majored in public speaking at the University of Iowa and became a member of a Des Moines stock company. Nagel served in the United States Navy during World War I, and made his first film in 1919, becoming one of Hollywood's favorite stars. He made the transition from silent films to talkies successfully. In 1933 he returned to the stage, alternating with screen roles. For the last dozen years he has also directed and narrated radio dramatic programs.

As an apprentice acrobat in a circus, Hollywood actor Burt Lancaster jumped from small town to small town, earning board, room and three dollars a week. But he is a native New Yorker, and after his circus experience toured in vaudeville. During World War II Burt was in Army Special Service in Italy and North Africa. He has been on the screen since 1946 in The Killers, Desert Town, Brute Force, and others.

IT HAPPENED TODAY

The battle of Blenheim took place on this date in 1704, when the Duke of Marlborough and Allies won a victory over the French and Bavarians, in Germany. William Caxton, first English printer, was born on Aug. 13, circa 1422, and Lucy Stone, American social reformer and lecturer for anti-slavery and women's rights, was born on this date in 1818.

Six tricks in hearts, two in spades, two in diamonds and one in clubs made only twelve. A winning club finesse could make the needed thirteenth, but the double marked that as a loser. Necessity being the mother of invention, South definitely planned a squeeze for the first time in his life. Its format was to have, when the last heart was led, the diamond 9 and club J, and in the dummy the diamond K-10 and club Q. Then, if West held the diamond Q-J and club K—as was probable from his double—he would be squeezed.

That's just the way it worked out. Three tricks in spades, the minor aces and then the heart tricks were run. When the last was led, West was stuck. If he discarded the club K, the Q would become good. So he threw off the diamond J. The club Q was then shed from dummy, the diamond 9 was led to the K, dropping the Q, and the diamond 10 took the final trick.

NEW YORK—My cousin Gregory is 19 and he is going to be an actor. Ordinarily this would be of interest to a few well-chosen relatives, greasepaint manufacturers trying to build up a sucker list, and no one else at all.

As a matter of fact, even the relatives will be losing some of their polite interest when this cold fall comes along, since Gregory, unless he is man enough and valiant enough to take an icepick and puncture his eardrum, is going to be in the United States Army. There will be, thus, a slight interruption in his campaign to make the populace forget John Barrymore.

For several months, however, I have been on the prowl for some young soul who:

(1)—Is taking the first uncertain steps in the direction of the stage.

(2)—Is appearing in summer stock.

My cousin Gregory fills both bills and so I think his information and comments may make a column involving those subjects. Actually, it is just as if I were finding out all about it from a bright young stranger, since to the best of my knowledge I never had seen Gregory until the other morning.

Most of the Heimers appear to be given to frequent visits to uncles and aunts, but I am the exception; I am the anti-social black sheep to whom most of my relatives are vague, cloudy figures, remembered only dimly from my youth and undoubtedly a good deal fatter, older and more crochety than I recall them.

It appears that the germ enters your blood-stream in high school. My cousin Gregory went to school over in Maywood, N. J., and somewhere near the end of his school days he turned up in a couple of undergraduate plays and found out he could make his fellow juveniles laugh.

TO MAKE WITH THE FOOLISHNESS when you are young and then to hear a roar of laughter is a needy thing. The next thing you knew school was over and Gregory was entered in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

Farmers' Aid Needed In Program

Support Plan Cooperation Cited

COLUMBUS, Aug. 13—Government price support programs depend upon farmers' cooperation, declares Dale C. Williams, chairman, Ohio Production and Marketing Administration.

He explains that both loan and purchase agreements are available to support wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, and grain sorghum prices; but no plan or system will work well unless farmers make more provision to store grain and corn on farms.

Under the government purchase agreement, a farmer may specify the quantity of grain upon which he wants price support. He still holds title to the grain and he may sell it on the open market if he wished to sell it there. Under the terms of the agreement, the Commodity Credit Corporation will purchase the grain at the support price if the farmer prefers that outlet.

Williams says that current crop reports indicate the 1948 production of feed grains will exceed the 1947 total by about 1,000,000,000 bushels. To market that amount of feed grains in any other manner than an orderly manner, farm storage space for 800,000,000 million bushels more than were stored in 1947 will be needed.

RECENT embargoes on rail shipments of wheat are an indication of conditions that will exist if all farmers try to move corn about the time the wheat tangle is straightened out.

The Ohio chairman announces the suggested 1949 wheat goal has been set at 71,500,000 acres for the United States, which is a reduction of more than 3,000,000 acres from the plantings for the 1948 crop but the 1949 goal is about the same as the 1948 harvested acreage. Considerable winter wheat planted in 1947 was abandoned before harvest time.

Williams says an increased supply of seeds used to plant winter cover crops is badly needed to start U. S. farm land back toward better condition.

Farm soils have been cropped heavily for almost 10 years, and the increased acreages of grains and soybeans have dipped heavily into soil fertility reserves.

Farmers have been selling their soil's productivity along with the crops, and there is a limit that such depletion can be continued before crop yields drop below profitable levels.

Couple Using Amphibious Jeep To Round World

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—An adventurous Australian and his American wife are headed for the Azores today aboard an amphibious jeep on the first leg of a round the world trip.

The couple, Maj. Benjamin Carlin of Perth, Australia, and his wife, Eleanor, of Boston, were sighted by a Navy Squadron 120 miles off Atlantic City.

Ware Lynch, a New York public relations man, said that the pair intend to travel around the world in their versatile vehicle, using it on both land and sea.

Carlin yesterday told the destroyer squadron that sighted and hailed his strange craft that he and his wife had ample fuel and provisions "aboard," and were on their way to the Azores.

The Azores, a part of Portugal, lie astride the gulf stream two-thirds of the way across the Atlantic.

LYNCH SAID that the Carlins sailed from Gravesend Bay, Brooklyn, Saturday on their projected world tour after three false starts.

He said that they would go from the Azores to North Africa, then motor along the Mediterranean coast to Cairo.

The Carlins then plan to make their way to Rangoon, Burma, and then make an island-to-island hop across the Pacific to Honolulu and San Francisco, from where they plan to drive to New York.

He added that the jeep has one bunk, and is enclosed by a plexiglas dome to keep out the sea.

The Man Who Brought Others

ANDREW BRINGS MEN TO JESUS

Scripture—Matthew 4:18; Mark 1:16-21, 29; 3:18; 13:3-7; Luke 6:14; John 1:37-43; 6:8-9; 12:20-32; Acts 1:12-14.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
ANOTHER HUMBLED, but good, industrious, honest and useful man is brought to our attention in this lesson. He was Andrew, one of Christ's first followers.

Andrew brought his own brother, Simon Peter, to Jesus, telling Peter that he, Andrew, had found the Messiah. It came about in this way: John the Baptist was preaching the coming of Christ, and one of John's disciples was this same Andrew. He and a companion were near when John the Baptist pointed to Jesus, who was walking nearby and said, "Behold the Lamb of God!"

Hearing this the two men followed Jesus, and when he asked them what they wanted, they asked him where he lived and went with him to his abode. After talking with Jesus for some hours, Andrew sought out his brother, Simon Peter, and said, "We have found the Messiah," and he brought Simon to Jesus.

Jesus looked at Peter, saying, "Thou art Simon, the son of Jona, thou shalt be called Cephas, which is a stone."

This was Andrew's role in life. He never put himself forward; he was content to work for Christ, to bring others to His notice. He was the first missionary.

His first thought on discovering his Master was to tell his brother—someone near to him—and to have him share his joy. Missionaries have for years been sent to far-off countries to spread the gospel. They do wonderful work, aiding their converts to a better way of life physically, as well as spiritually, and caring for them in sickness of body as well as of mind.

About a year later, after Andrew brought Peter to Jesus, the Messiah was walking by the Sea of Galilee, and again saw the two brothers, Peter and Andrew. The two men were casting their fishing nets into the sea, and Jesus said to them, "Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men."

"And they straightway left their nets and followed Him."

Mark tells us of the time Jesus chose His apostles and gave them power to perform miracles. Simon Peter was the first mentioned, then James, next John, and fourth Andrew. John really tells us more about Andrew than any of the other scriptural writers. Andrew himself never wrote about his experiences. He let others do the work that most impressed the world.

John tells us of another incident in Andrew's life. It seems there were some Greeks (Galilee was full of Greeks) who embraced the Jewish faith and came up to Jerusalem to worship at the Jewish feast. They had heard of Jesus and came to Philip, one of the twelve, and a Galilean, and said, "Sir, we would see Jesus."

Philip seems not to have known just what to do, so he spoke to Andrew, and it was Andrew who went to Jesus.

Another episode was that of the miracle of feeding several thousand people with five barley loaves and two small fishes. Andrew did not perform the miracle, of course, but he was the man to notice the boy who had the food and he called Jesus' attention to the lad.

Andrew seemed always keen to see things that needed to be done—and to do them or see that they were done. They were not necessarily big tasks in themselves, but often they led to something important, as in this last case.

Andrew never was jealous of others who were put before him. His brother Peter was the leader, and Andrew willingly and cheerfully conceded that place to him with no thought for himself.

His was the same task that Jesus gave to the man possessed of a devil which the Lord cast out. Mark tells us that Jesus said to him, "Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee." That was Andrew's mission in life.

That is also the mission of each one of us, individually, and of our great country in these troubled times. If we forget ourselves and remember how blessed we are and try to show everyone with whom we come in contact—here and abroad in foreign lands—that we are not self-seeking, but desirous of bringing the understanding and freedom—which we enjoy—to them, surely we will help to bring about that peace for which we all pray.

Beauty To Host Miners Meeting

BRIDGEPORT, Aug. 13—The statewide miners' safety meeting at Bridgeport tomorrow will boast as hostesses "16 of the best looking coal miners' wives in Ohio."

Newspaper columnist Hi Waters McWilliams made the selection from a field of 15,000 con-

McWilliams said he based his choice on several factors including the claim made by each husband that his wife was perfect.

The ladies will serve in their official capacity at the miners' meeting which is being sponsored jointly by the Ohio Industrial Commission and the operators and miners.

Farmers' Aid Needed In Program

Support Plan Cooperation Cited

COLUMBUS, Aug. 13—Government price support programs depend upon farmers' cooperation, declares Dale C. Williams, chairman, Ohio Production and Marketing Administration.

He explains that both loan and purchase agreements are available to support wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, and grain sorghum prices; but no plan or system will work well unless farmers make more provision to store grain and corn on farms.

Under the government purchase agreement, a farmer may specify the quantity of grain upon which he wants price support. He still holds title to the grain and he may sell it on the open market if he wished to sell it there. Under the terms of the agreement, the Commodity Credit Corporation will purchase the grain at the support price if the farmer prefers that outlet.

Williams says that current crop reports indicate the 1948 production of feed grains will exceed the 1947 total by about 1,000,000,000 bushels. To market that amount of feed grains in any other year than 1947 will be more than 600,000,000 bushels more than were stored in 1947 will be needed.

RECENT embargoes on rail shipments of wheat are an indication of conditions that will exist if all farmers try to move corn about the time the wheat tangle is straightened out.

The Ohio chairman announces the suggested 1949 wheat goal has been set at 71,500,000 acres for the United States, which is a reduction of more than 3,000,000 acres from the plantings for the 1948 crop but the 1949 goal is about the same as the 1948 harvested acreage. Considerable winter wheat planted in 1947 was abandoned before harvest time.

Williams says an increased supply of seeds used to plant winter cover crops is badly needed to start U. S. farm land back toward better condition.

Farm soils have been cropped heavily for almost 10 years, and the increased acreages of grains and soybeans have dipped heavily into soil fertility reserves.

Farmers have been selling their soil's productivity along with the crops, and there is a limit that such depletion can be continued before crop yields drop below profitable levels.

Couple Using Amphibious Jeep To Round World

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—An adventurous Australian and his American wife are headed for the Azores today aboard an amphibious jeep on the first leg of a round the world trip.

The couple, Maj. Benjamin Carlin of Perth, Australia, and his wife, Eleanor, of Boston, were sighted by a Navy Squadron 120 miles off Atlantic City.

Ware Lynch, a New York public relations man, said that the pair intend to travel around the world in their versatile vehicle, using it on both land and sea.

Carlin yesterday told the destroyer squadron that sighted and hailed his strange craft that he and his wife had ample fuel and provisions "aboard," and were on their way to the Azores.

The Azores, a part of Portugal, lie astride the gulf stream two-thirds of the way across the Atlantic.

LYNCH SAID that the Carlins sailed from Gravesend Bay, Brooklyn, Saturday on their projected world tour after three false starts.

He said that they would go from the Azores to North Africa, then motor along the Mediterranean coast to Cairo.

The Carlins then plan to make their way to Rangoon, Burma, and then make an island-to-island hop across the Pacific to Honolulu and San Francisco, from where they plan to drive to New York.

He added that the jeep has one bunk, and is enclosed by a plexiglas dome to keep out the sea.

The Man Who Brought Others

ANDREW BRINGS MEN TO JESUS

Scripture—Matthew 4:18; Mark 1:16-21, 29; 3:18; 13:3-7; Luke 6:14; John 1:37-43; 6:8-9; 12:20-32; Acts 1:12-14.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

ANOTHER HUMBLE, but good, industrious, honest and useful man is brought to our attention in this lesson. He was Andrew, one of Christ's first followers.

Andrew brought his own brother, Simon Peter, to Jesus, telling Peter that he, Andrew, had found the Messiah. It came about in this way: John the Baptist was preaching the coming of Christ, and one of John's disciples was this same Andrew. He and a companion were near when John the Baptist pointed to Jesus, who was walking nearby and said, "Behold the Lamb of God!"

Hearing this the two men followed Jesus, and when He asked them what they wanted, they asked Him where He lived and went with Him to His abode. After talking with Jesus for some hours, Andrew sought out his brother, Simon Peter, and said, "We have found the Messiah," and he brought Simon to Jesus.

Jesus looked at Peter, saying, "Thou art Simon, the son of Jona, thou shalt be called Cephas, which is a stone."

This was Andrew's role in life. He never put himself forward; he was content to work for Christ, to bring others to His notice. He was the first missionary.

His first thought on discovering his Master was to tell his brother—someone near to him—and to have him share his joy. Missionaries have for years been sent to faroff countries to spread the gospel. They do wonderful work, aiding their converts to a better way of life physically, as well as spiritually, and caring for them in sickness of body as well as of mind.

About a year later, after Andrew brought Peter to Jesus, the Messiah was walking by the Sea of Galilee, and again saw the two brothers, Peter and Andrew. The two men were casting their fishing nets into the sea, and Jesus said to them, "Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men." "And they straightway left their nets and followed Him."

Mark tells us of the time Jesus chose His apostles and gave them power to perform miracles. Simon Peter was the first mentioned, then James, next John, and fourth Andrew. John really tells us more about Andrew than any of the other scriptural writers. Andrew himself never wrote about his experiences. He let others do the work that most impressed the world.

John tells us of another incident in Andrew's life. It seems there were some Greeks (Galilee was full of Greeks) who embraced the Jewish faith and came up to Jerusalem to worship at the Jewish feast. They had heard of Jesus and came to Philip, one of the twelve, and a Galilean, and said, "Sir, we would see Jesus."

Philip seems not to have known just what to do, so he spoke to Andrew, and it was Andrew who went to Jesus.

Another episode was that of the miracle of feeding several thousand people with five barley loaves and two small fishes. Andrew did not perform the miracle, of course, but he was the man to notice the boy who had the food and he called Jesus' attention to the lad.

Andrew seemed always keen to see things that needed to be done—and to do them or see that they were done. They were not necessarily big tasks in themselves, but often they led to something important, as in this last case.

Andrew never was jealous of others who were put before him. His brother Peter was the leader, and Andrew willingly and cheerfully conceded that place to him with no thought for himself.

His was the same task that Jesus gave to the man possessed of a devil, which the Lord cast out. Mark tells us that Jesus said to him, "Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee." That was Andrew's mission in life.

That is also the mission of each one of us, individually, and of our great country in these troubled times. If we forget ourselves and remember how blessed we are and try to show everyone with whom we come in contact—here and abroad in foreign lands—that we are not self-seeking, but desirous of bringing the understanding and freedom—which we enjoy—to them, surely we will help to bring about that peace for which we all pray.

Ohio Turkey Men Plan 'Roundup'

Field Day Set
To Air Problems

COLUMBUS, Aug. 13—One Ohio group is going to eat turkey this Fall but those eaters have a shortcut to get at the supply because Ohio turkey growers are holding their annual roundup Oct. 7, Delaware County Fairgrounds, and roast turkey will be prepared to supplement picnic baskets.

The day's speaker will be Dr. W. A. Billings, University of Wisconsin, who is credited with being the nation's best 'turkey' talker.

D. D. Moyer, specialist in poultry husbandry reports Ohio's 1948 turkey crop considerably under that of 1947, and the nation's prospective supply of holiday birds is way short of expected demand. Ohio growers have had little trouble with disease in their turkey flocks so far this year but Moyer warns them to keep the birds moving to new range to avoid outbreaks of blackhead.

This university specialist claims the system of moving the growing turkeys to clean range every week, or 10 days is a much better way to control disease outbreaks than to rely on any drugs.

THE SYSTEM of rotation pasture also provides a way to keep down costs of producing turkey meat because good legume forage and the insects found on the range will replace a lot of high priced grains and concentrates.

Moyer advises Ohio growers to start feeding their turkeys a little grain now as the gain in weight made by fast growth will save feed later during the fattening period. He also says that buyers are going to walk away from retail counters next Thanksgiving and at Christmas time if they are offered scrawny birds darkened by pin feathers when the price tags say the goods are luxuries.

Plans for the roundup at Delaware include discussions of methods of selling them when the price is high. Moyer declares that short supply and a big demand does not make marketing a trouble-free operation.

Ohio Turkey Men Plan 'Roundup'

Field Day Set To Air Problems

COLUMBUS, Aug. 13—One Ohio group is going to eat turkey this fall but those eaters have a shortcut to get at the supply because Ohio turkey growers are holding their annual roundup Oct. 7, Delaware County Fairgrounds, and roast turkey will be prepared to supplement picnic baskets.

The day's speaker will be Dr. W. A. Billings, University of Wisconsin, who is credited with being the nation's best 'turkey' talker.

D. D. Moyer, specialist in poultry husbandry reports Ohio's 1948 turkey crop considerably under that of 1947, and the nation's prospective supply of holiday birds is way short of expected demand. Ohio growers have had little trouble with disease in their turkey flocks so far this year but Moyer warns them to keep the birds moving to new range to avoid outbreaks of blackhead.

This university specialist claims the system of moving the growing turkeys to clean range every week or 10 days is a much better way to control disease outbreaks than to rely on any drugs.

THE SYSTEM of rotation pasture also provides a way to keep down costs of producing turkey meat because good legume forage and the insects found on the range will replace a lot of high priced grains and concentrates.

Moyer advises Ohio growers to start feeding their turkeys a little grain now as the gain in weight made by fast growth will save feed later during the fattening period. He also says that buyers are going to walk away from retail counters next Thanksgiving and at Christmas time if they are offered scrawny birds darkened by pin feathers when the price tags say the goods are luxuries.

Plans for the roundup at Delaware include discussions of methods of selling them when the price is high. Moyer declares that short supply and a big demand does not make marketing a trouble-free operation.

Beulah Ready For Fall Races

COLUMBUS, Aug. 13—There'll be running races at Beulah Park this Fall—38 days of them, as a matter of fact.

An eight-months battle between the State Racing Commission and operators of the Grove City track ended abruptly late yesterday.

Robert J. Dienst, president of the Beulah Park Jockey Club, announced his capitulation to the commission's demand that he install a totalizer at his track.

Dienst also succumbed to demands of the American Totalizer Co. for a five-year lease on the mechanical totalizer.

His agreement to terms cleared the way for assignment of Sept. 4 to Oct. 16 for a Beulah Race meeting.

Golf Tourney In 2nd Round

Second round play in the Pickaway Country Club championship golf tournament began Friday morning.

Scores for the first round, turned in before the deadline Thursday, show that Bob Moon defeated Berlin Blankenship one up in 18 holes. Lovel Blankenship downed Felix Dore one up in 18 holes and John Jenkins defeated Harley Weir two and one on 18 holes.

Bob Fritche, last year's club champion, is to defend his title for the second round of the tourney against Moon. Other pairings for the second round include matches between Tom Evland and Jenkins, John Woods and Art Marshall and Loyal Blankenship and John Schiff.

Rodney Favored In Trot Derby

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 13—R. H. Johnston's four-year-old trotter, Rodney, has been established the favorite in today's running of the $5,000 Trotting Derby at Good Time Park.

The Trotting Derby shares the spot light on the card with the Hambletonian consolidation race, the A. H. F. Seeger Memorial for three-year-olds.

The third-place St. Louis Cardinals muffed an opportunity to pass the Dodgers when they also were nosed out in the ninth, by Pittsburgh, 3 to 2. A pinch single by Max West, an error by Marty Marion, a sacrifice, and a two-run single by Wally Westlake pulled the game out of the fire for the Bucs.

Alumni Tourney Nearing Finale

Pickaway County Alumni softball tournament may reach completion at Ted Lewis Park Sunday when the winners of last week's first round play for the championship.

Monroe Township Alumni is to meet Scioto Township in the second round opener at 1:30 p. m. Sunday, and the winner of the game is to meet Walnut Alumni shortly after. The winner of the second game will be acclaimed "champ".

However, the tourney may be extended another week if the winner of the first game loses the second tilt. In that event, second place in tourney standings would be tied, necessitating a playoff the following Sunday afternoon.

NORTHERNERS FAVORED

20,000 Expected To See Annual All-Star Battle

CANTON, Aug. 13—Civil war—callously fomented by the Ohio High School Football Coaches Association—will flare in Fawcett Stadium here tonight as North meets South in the annual scholastic all-star grid game.

Fifty-two of the state's best gridgers of last season will sparkle in the third annual classic, held in Canton for the second straight year. A capacity crowd of more than 20,000 is expected.

This year, for the first time the rival squads will be directed by high school coaches—outstanding mentors chosen from the ranks of the coaching fraternity's own membership.

For the North, it's grizzled, portly Harry Strobel at the helm. His 1947 Barborton high school team was undefeated and generally recognized as state champion.

Coach of the Southern force is lean, drawing Chuck Mather, whose Hamilton high 11 lost only one game.

STROBEL'S Yankees will enter the contest in the favorite's role. The Northerners will pack a weight advantage of nearly 20 pounds per man. Moreover, they're almost disgustingly healthy compared to a rebel roster that lists a half dozen casualties.

Best of all, the North will be sparked by two young men with whom Strobel is thoroughly familiar—Halfbacks Paul Goudor and Dick Goudy from his own championship team.

Mather will counter the North's potentially brilliant running attack with a passing weapon kingpinned by one of his Hamilton proteges, Halfback Jack Browning.

Browning is something of a phenom. He's actually played only five games of scholastic ball, and he was hand-picked by Mather. The rebel coach discovered the stocky youth just before the season began last fall.

In the fifth game of the year, Browning suffered a broken leg and was lost for the season. However, Mather had seen enough. He vows that the brainy quarterback will be the individual star of the contest.

Browning will have plenty of competition for that honor. In addition to Goudor and Goudy, the Barborton touchdown twins, the North has All-Ohio Back Ray Hamilton from Canton McKinley and highly touted Vic Janowicz of Elyria, also an All-State choice.

South backfield mainstays will be Jack Wagner, fullback for undefeated Piqua, and Dick Arledge, Chillicothe captain and quarterback.

TONY MOROCCO, Youngstown Ursuline back, and Tom Seaman, Canton Lincoln guard, are co-captains of the North forces. Thor Ronemus, tough Springfield guard, will be field leader of the rebel forces.

Despite their favored status, the North has yet to win an all-star fracas. The South captured the first game at Toledo in 1946, and last year the charges of Wes Fesler and Ray Eliot battled to a 6-all deadlock.

Another low-scoring game isn't likely to result tonight. For one thing, Fesler and Eliot were dividing their attention a year ago between coaching the gridgers and participating in a companion clinic for coaches.

To simplify matters, they used set defenses and no great variety of offensive fireworks. This time, Strobel and Mather and their respective staffs had no distractions—they've driven their charges as if they were preparing for a regular season. The accent will be on offense, and there'll be action aplenty for fans who jam their way into the scenic stadium for the gala attraction.

Local Riflemen Edged In CORL Outdoor Match

Circleville riflemen Sunday at Columbus scored 3,159 points to finish four points behind the frontrunning Chillicothe-Washington C. H. combination.

Jim Stout, by virtue of winning the iron sight aggregate, was advanced to A Class composed of top shooters in the Central Ohio League. W. Campbell, of Circleville, won the C Class iron sight aggregate.

Stout fired the league's top 100-yard any-sight score for the year, registering 200 with 17 X's in the season's first match held in Circleville.

Official Circleville scores of the last CORL match of the year and announced Friday follow.

Browns Session To Tell Tale

BOWLING GREEN, Aug. 13—Whether Arthur Christ is successful in gaining a berth on the Cleveland Browns roster will be determined here tomorrow when the All-America Conference champs hold their annual intrasquad game.

Christ is a versatile man and if he fails in his bid to beat out Roy Kurrasch and Tod Saylor for a job as end, there are jobs waiting for him in three other fields.

He can go into coaching at his alma mater, Springfield college, take a job in rehabilitation work at the Veterans' Administration or resume his career as a musician.

Lockbourne '9' Clips Boys In Tourney Game

Lockbourne Merchants softball team edged Boys 3-2 Thursday night to cap the second game of the first round in the Circleville Night Softball League tournament.

Boys began the scoring in the first inning of the Thursday tilt, posting a brace of tallies when Boyd Shortstop Teddy Sims poled a homerun to centerfield with a mate aboard.

However, the game settled down into a pitcher's match in later innings, both teams chalking up zeroes for the next three frames.

Lockbourne snapped into form in the fifth inning, posting three runs on three singles, a wild pitch and an error.

The fifth inning spree for Lockbourne was the last of the scoring in the game, although Boys threatened in the last of the seventh frame.

TOURNAMENT schedule for Friday night calls for Isals to meet Mumaws at 7:15 p. m., their game to be followed by a contest between Tinks and Walnut Alumni.

The Millirons-Belmont AC game postponed from Wednesday night is to be played at 8:15 p. m. Saturday.

Junior Olympics Parley To Stress Details Of Trip

Pickaway County Junior Olympics heads are to meet in Court-Main restaurant at 8 p. m. Friday to plan for the coming National Junior Olympiad.

Invited to the session are the parents of the lads who are to represent Pickaway County in the national event, which is to be held on the campus of Baldwin and Wallace college Aug. 27 and 28.

The Friday session will be the first meeting between the Olympics heads and parents of the youthful athletes who gained their honors at the Fair-ground last Saturday.

The group of 25 youngsters to be sent to the national meet are to be sent through the combined efforts of various service and social organizations of Circleville.

Detailed plans concerning transportation, supervision, etc., for the lads on the trip will be presented for the parents' approval at the meeting.

Each lad must have his parents' consent before he can take part in the trip and Olympiad.

Junior Legion '9' Given Feed, Trip To Doubleheader

Circleville American Legion Junior baseball team was given a banquet Thursday night following the close of its first year of play.

Certificates of award were issued to each team member, and special award certificates were issued Bob Glick, who had the highest batting average, most stolen bases and most three base hits for the year; Walter Bumgarner, who tied for home run honors and two base hits; Dave Luckhart, who was tied for number of homeruns, and Dave Kraft, who amassed a total of 70 strikeouts whirl on the mound for the Juniors during the season.

The lads were treated to the doubleheader Columbus Red Bird-Toledo Mud Hen game in Columbus following the banquet in a local cafe.

Olympic Card About Finished; Amity Prevails

LONDON, Aug. 13—Olympic competition will come to a close today for another four years, with Anglo-American relations apparently restored to a final halcyon spirit of amity.

As the last day of heavy competition opened, the "old school tie" was reestablished by the strangest of all incidents—a clear-cut American defeat.

Around the Uxbridge camp, very few people from the coaches down the line offered any excuses for the defeat of the American 440-yard relay team by the Britishers in yesterday's post-Olympic track and field fixture at White City stadium.

England, which in the Olympics proper had been awarded the 400 meters, the equivalent of this event, due to the disqualification of the Americans, only to have the decision reversed later, won this time in 41.8 with at least four yards to spare.

Perhaps the overwhelming victory of the Americans, by a margin of 11-1/2 to 3-1/2, for the entire post-Olympic meet had something to do with their generous viewpoint.

Most commentators pointed out that the track was loose yesterday and that the winning time of 41.8 was not comparable with the Americans' speed in the Olympic event. Despite this, everyone believed the millenium almost had been reached and apparently everybody was satisfied.

Red Birds Play 23 Frames, Drop To Fifth Place

By International News Service

The Columbus Red Birds woke up screaming, "there ain't no justice," this morning.

They struggled through 23 innings of baseball last night, scored 20 runs to 12 for the opposing Toledo Mud Hens, and all that happened was that they fell out of a fourth-place tie back into the second division of the American Association standings.

The Birds dropped a 15-inning first game, 9 to 8, and then snapped back with a 12-to-3 victory in an eight-inning nightcap that was called because of the 12:50 a. m. league curfew.

Meanwhile, St. Paul broke a deadlock with the Birds by winning a single game from Minneapolis, 8 to 2.

Eric Tipton hit his 23rd homerun, putting him one behind Al Rosen of Kansas City, the league leader. Andy Gilbert of Minneapolis also socked a circuit clout.

In the only other game played, Second Place Milwaukee did all its scoring in the eighth inning and defeated Kansas City, 5 to 3.

Blackship Cops Randall Feature

CLEVELAND, Aug. 13—Blackship came romping home to a neck victory over Music Miss yesterday in the Stow Purse at Randall Park, after a thunderstorm knocked out the track's power plant and brought about an hour intermission.

Blackship was a 5-2 second choice to the three-year-old Queen Gohi in the six-furlong Stow, over every yard of which she was pressed by the 23-1 Music Miss.

However, Mather had seen enough. He vows that the brainy quarterback will be the individual star of the contest.

Browning will have plenty of competition for that honor. In addition to Gonder and Goudy, the Barberton touchdown twins, the North has All-Ohio Back Ray Hamilton from Canton McKinley and highly touted Vic Janowicz of Elyria, also an All-State choice.

South backfield mainstays will be Jack Wagner, fullback for undefeated Piqua, and Dick Arledge, Chillicothe captain and quarterback.

TONY MOROCCO, Youngstown Ursuline back, and Tom Seaman, Canton Lincoln guard, are co-captains of the North forces. Thor Romenus, tough Springfield guard, will be field leader of the rebel forces.

Despite their favored status, the North has yet to win an all-star fracas. The South captured the first game at Toledo in 1946, and last year the charges of Wes Fesler and Ray Eliot battled to a 6-all deadlock.

Another low-scoring game isn't likely to result tonight. For one thing, Fesler and Eliot were dividing their attention a year ago between coaching the gridgers and participating in a companion clinic for coaches.

To simplify matters, they used set defenses and no great variety of offensive fireworks. This time, Strobel and Mather and their respective staffs had no distractions—they've driven their charges as if they were preparing for a regular season. The accent will be on offense, and there'll be action aplenty for fans who jam their way into the scenic stadium for the gala attraction.

Local Rifleman Edged In CORL Outdoor Match

Circleville rifleman Sunday at Columbus scored 3,159 points to finish four points behind the frontrunning Chillicothe-Washington C. H. combination.

Jim Stout, by virtue of winning the iron sight aggregate, was advanced to A Class composed of top shooters in the Central Ohio League. W. Campbell, of Circleville, won the C Class iron sight aggregate.

Stout fired the league's top 100-yard any-sight score for the year, registering 200 with 17 X's in the season's first match held in Circleville.

Official Circleville scores of the last CORL match of the year and announced Friday follow.

Browns Session To Tell Tale

BOWLING GREEN, Aug. 13—Whether Arthur Christ is successful in gaining a berth on the Cleveland Browns roster will be determined here tomorrow when the All-America Conference champs hold their annual intrasquad game.

Christ is a versatile man and if he fails in his bid to beat out Roy Kurrasch and Tod Saylor for a job as end, there are jobs waiting for him in three other fields.

He can go into coaching at his alma mater, Springfield college, take a job in rehabilitation work at the Veterans' Administration or resume his career as a musician.

Lockbourne '9' Clips Boyds In Tourney Game

Lockbourne Merchants softball team edged Boyds 3-2 Thursday night to cop the second game of the first round in the Circleville Night Softball League tournament.

Boys began the scoring in the first inning of the Thursday tilt, posting a brace of tallies when Boyd Shortstop Teddy Sims poled a homerun to centerfield with a mate aboard.

However, the game settled down into a pitcher's match in later innings, both teams chalking up zeroes for the next three frames.

Lockbourne snapped into form in the fifth inning, posting three runs on three singles, a wild pitch and an error.

The fifth inning spree for Lockbourne was the last of the scoring in the game, although Boyds threatened in the last of the seventh frame.

TOURNAMENT schedule for Friday night calls for Isals to meet Mumaws at 7:15 p. m., their game to be followed by a contest between Tinks and Walnut Alumni.

The Millions-Belmont AC game postponed from Wednesday night is to be played at 8:15 p. m. Saturday.

Junior Olympics Parley To Stress Details Of Trip

Pickaway County Junior Olympics heads are to meet in Court-Main restaurant at 8 p. m. Friday to plan for the coming National Junior Olympiad.

Invited to the session are the parents of the lads who are to represent Pickaway County in the national event, which is to be held on the campus of Baldwin and Wallace college Aug. 27 and 28.

The Friday session will be the first meeting between the Olympics heads and parents of the youthful athletes who gained their honors at the Fairground last Saturday.

The group of 25 youngsters to be sent to the national meet are to be sent through the combined efforts of various service and social organizations of Circleville.

Detailed plans concerning transportation, supervision, etc., for the lads on the trip will be presented for the parents' approval at the meeting.

Each lad must have his parents' consent before he can take part in the trip and Olympiad.

Junior Legion '9' Given Feed, Trip To Doubleheader

Circleville American Legion Junior baseball team was given a banquet Thursday night following the close of its first year of play.

Certificates of award were issued to each team member, and special award certificates were issued Bob Glick, who had the highest batting average, most stolen bases and most three base hits for the year; Walter Bumgarner, who tied for home run honors and two base hit honors; Abe Rihl, who tied for number of homers, and Dave Kraft, who amassed a total of 70 strikeouts whirl on the mound for the Juniors during the season.

The lads were treated to the doubleheader Columbus Red Bird-Toledo Mud Hen game in Columbus following the banquet in a local cafe.

Red Birds Play 23 Frames, Drop To Fifth Place

By International News Service

The Columbus Red Birds woke up screaming, "there ain't no justice," this morning.

They struggled through 23 innings of baseball last night, scored 20 runs to 12 for the opposing Toledo Mud Hens, and all that happened was that they fell out of a fourth-place tie back into the second division of the American Association standings.

The Birds dropped a 15-inning first game, 9 to 8, and then snapped back with a 12-to-3 victory in an eight-inning nightcap that was called because of the 12:50 a. m. league curfew.

Meanwhile, St. Paul broke a deadlock with the Birds by winning a single game from Minneapolis, 8 to 2.

Eric Tipton hit his 23rd homerun, putting him one behind Al Rosen of Kansas City, the league leader. Andy Gilbert of Minneapolis also socked a circuit clout.

In the only other game played, Second Place Milwaukee did all its scoring in the eighth inning and defeated Kansas City, 5 to 3.

City's Only Bakery Starting 37th Year In Business

Ed Wallace Recalls Old Days

Bread Once Sold 6 Loaves, 25 Cents

Circleville's only bakery began its 37th year of business in the city Friday.

It is Wallace's bakery on West Main street, which began its initial venture into Circleville business life Aug. 13, 1911, on South Pickaway street.

The bakery, like so many other businesses which help a town thrive through its expanding years, has a colorful background, extending from the horse and buggy days.

Ed Wallace, who founded the business, has many tales of the bakery's history, dating from an era when bread sold at six loaves for a quarter to the present day when a single loaf will bring half the price at which the half-dozen were sold.

Wallace's story begins in 1904, when he was an employee of the Washington bakery, a then new business venture for Circleville. Wallace relates he worked in the Washington bakery for seven years, and, prior to buying the business, had reached the position of head baker.

BAKERY BUSINESS in that day was not in the stepped-up stages it is now enjoying, for the private housewife made nearly all her own pastries and breads then.

However, business was good enough to start a delivery route, and the bakery delivery here was initiated with a horse-drawn cart, selling its six loaves for a quarter to those able to afford "store-bought" bread and to those who thought the Wallace bread "better than mama's."

Following a few year's expansion period, the bakery was moved into a West Main street location, one alley further west than its present location. There, innovations were made in the bread and pastry line, with waxed-paper wrappings put on each individual loaf of bread and a few cakes baked for the Circleville homemakers.

In 1921 the bakery had expanded even further and it was again moved, this time into the building it now occupies.

More innovations were in store for the city housewives, for new machinery had been developed which made bread-making more simple and sanitary, for the old style method of leavening the dough and preparing it in the molds by hand was done away with.

A new oven replaced the old style one previously used, and all of the bread and cookies were baked with a proportionate evenness, instead of the old style way, which left the side of the loaf nearest the source of heat scorched while the far side barely baked.

Other new machinery such as the doughnut frier, dough mixer, bread molder, cookie maker and bread slicing and wrapping

Repair Crews Clearing Tracks

WELLSVILLE, Aug. 13—Repair crews worked swiftly today to repair several hundred feet of main line trackage of the Pennsylvania railroad at Wellsville following derailment of 32 freight cars.

H. Benjamin Wilt, 54, of Sebring, a conductor, was injured when a passing 69-car eastbound train swayed against a 115-car diesel-powered west-bound train, derailing both.

Railroad officials estimated damage at $250,000 and said rails were bent and twisted, blocking all traffic over the double track system.

Police Hunt Bank Bandit

KEVIL, Ky., Aug. 13—State police joined Kevill, Ky., authorities today in a search for a daring gunman and two accomplices who robbed the Kevill Bank of $17,000.

It was the second robbery at the Kevill Bank in slightly more than a year. On June 30, 1947, the bank was robbed of $11,500.

A lone gunman entered the bank at noon yesterday and forced two assistant cashiers and two customers into the vault. He took all the money in sight and fled to a stolen automobile containing two accomplices.

Thursday, Friday Are Full Days As Park Program Nears Finale

Circleville youngsters attending the Kiwanis-sponsored Ted Lewis Park playground program put in a full day Thursday. On the schedule for the youngsters was a wiener roast, a swim party and 10 contests of skill.

Also on the list of activities was the playoff for the "Junior World Series" between the Giants and Tigers, which the Giants copied by swamping the Tigers 15-7. Winning pitcher was Joe Hill and Eddie Tomlinson was charged with the loss.

"Porgie" Johnson rapped out the longest safety of the contest, a homerun to rightfield.

There were 60 of the park youngsters on hand for the morning swim Thursday sponsored by Ray Goetting, and 45 turned out for the wiener roast at noon. Free pop was furnished at the roast.

The ten contests of skill were run off during the afternoon, with prizes donated by Circleville merchants given winners.

List of winners and runners-up in the various contests follow: Jim Binkley first in 8-11 year old accuracy softball throw, Jim Phillips second; Roy Huffer, first in the 12-15 year-old softball throw, with a five-way tie for second spot; Jim Phillips first in 8-11 distance throw, followed by Ronald Bennington; Tom Phillips winner in the 12-15 distance throw, followed by Roger Bennington and Skippy Johnson, tied for second.

BOB WELLINGTON first in 8-11 speed on basepaths, Jim Phillips, second; Roger Bennington first in 12-15 speed on bases, followed by Tom Phillips; Jerry Rooney first in distance hitting in 12-15, followed by Bob Turner;

and Pat Anderson first in 8-11 distance hitting, Alberta Hill second.

Alberta Hill won the final park jacks tournament Thursday.

Ronald Bennington was acclaimed the year's "champ" in boys' checkers, followed by Roger Graham, and Lena Hill copped the final girls' "champ" title by defeating Gloria Leist.

Friday, the last day of the Summer playground program this year, was to have been scheduled so that the championship game between the Cowboys and Roundtowners of the Class AA league was to have been played in the morning, followed by bicycle races and a treasure hunt after lunch.

Crew Escapes In Crash Landing

BERLIN, Aug. 13—The crew of an American C-54 transport had a lucky escape today when their craft crashed in a landing at Tempelhof airdrome and burst into flames.

The cargo-carrying airplane from Frankfurt was carrying in supplies to western sectors of Berlin as part of the allied airlift.

The landing crash was attributed to bad weather.

Death Verdict Hinges On Tests

WOOSTER, Aug. 13—Wayne County authorities today awaited results of medical tests in the death of Mrs. Birdie Gillette before deciding if charges are to be placed against Verlin E. Adkins, 26.

Adkins was returned to Wooster last night from Huntington, W. Va., from where he was extradited on a first-degree murder charge in connection with the nearby Rittman woman's death.

In Cleveland, Cuyahoga County Coroner Samuel R. Gerber said no definite findings resulted from the first tests made on the contents of the victim's stomach.

Mrs. Gillette's nude body was found on a bed in her apartment. A love note, signed by Adkins and found at her side, read that he killed her because "I loved her."

Rutted Street Ends Vacation

AKRON, Aug. 13—Akron's city councilmen cut into the middle of their five-week vacation today to hold a special meeting on the question of street paving.

John Head, vice president of the council, called the meeting to cope with the crisis created by unpaved Hammel street in the seventh ward.

According to Head, heavy bus traffic on the dirt street has caused dishes and other crockery to be shaken from householder's cupboards.

Columbus Solons Promise Scrap On Rate Hike

COLUMBUS, Aug. 13—The Columbus city council will ask for an injunction to stop the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. from raising its rates 4.4 per cent, if the company doesn't withdraw the proposal by Monday morning.

The rate boost is to take effect in Columbus and 66 other Ohio communities at midnight Monday.

The council said last night to ask for the injunction on the grounds that the utility failed to give proper notice of its proposed rate hike.

The city leaders also directed City Attorney Richard W. Gordon to demand "an itemized statement under oath" from the firm, "setting forth... the facts and figures justifying the proposed surcharge." Councilman Robert T. Oestreicher stated: "The corporation action smacks of bad faith... it appears... the company is jockeying for position so that it can cudgel the electric users into accepting terms of their own choosing." "The utility baron has enjoyed stupendous profits, its earnings are entirely out of proportion to the rates that are justified for a public utility."

6 Loaves, 25 Cents

Circleville's only bakery began its 37th year of business in the city Friday.

It is Wallace's bakery on West Main street, which began its initial venture into Circleville business life Aug. 13, 1911, on South Pickaway street.

The bakery, like so many other businesses which help a town thrive through its expanding years, has a colorful background, extending from the horse and buggy days.

Ed Wallace, who founded the business, has many tales of the bakery's history, dating from an era when bread sold at six loaves for a quarter to the present day when a single loaf will bring half the price at which the half-dozen were sold.

Wallace's story begins in 1904, when he was an employee of the Washington bakery, a then new business venture for Circleville. Wallace relates he worked in the Washington bakery for seven years, and, prior to buying the business, had reached the position of head baker.

BAKERY BUSINESS in that day was not in the stepped-up stages it is now enjoying, for the private housewife made nearly all her own pastries and breads then.

However, business was good enough to start a delivery route, and the bakery delivery here was initiated with a horse-drawn cart, selling its six loaves for a quarter to those able to afford "store-bought" bread and to those who thought the Wallace bread "better than mama's."

Following a few year's expansion period, the bakery was moved into a West Main street location, one alley further west than its present location. There, innovations were made in the bread and pastry line, with waxed-paper wrappings put on each individual loaf of bread and a few cakes baked for the Circleville homemakers.

In 1921 the bakery had expanded even further and it was again moved, this time into the building it now occupies.

More innovations were in store for the city housewives, for new machinery had been developed which made bread-making more simple and sanitary, for the old style method of leavening the dough and preparing it in the molds by hand was done away with.

A new oven replaced the old style one previously used, and all of the bread and cookies were baked with a proportionate evenness, instead of the old style way, which left the side of the loaf nearest the source of heat scorched while the far side barely baked.

Other new machinery such as the doughnut frier, dough mixer, bread molder, cookie maker and bread slicing and wrapping

Repair Crews Clearing Tracks

WELLSVILLE, Aug. 13—Repair crews worked swiftly today to repair several hundred feet of main line trackage of the Pennsylvania railroad at Wellsville following derailment of 32 freight cars.

H. Benjamin Wilt, 54, of Sebring, a conductor, was injured when a passing 69-car eastbound train swayed against a 115-car diesel-powered westbound train, derailing both.

Railroad officials estimated damage at $250,000 and said rails were bent and twisted, blocking all traffic over the double track system.

Police Hunt Bank Bandit

KEVIL, Ky., Aug. 13—State police joined Kevil, Ky., authorities today in a search for a daring gunman and two accomplices who robbed the Kevil Bank of $17,000.

It was the second robbery at the Kevil Bank in slightly more than a year. On June 30, 1947, the bank was robbed of $11,500.

A lone gunman entered the bank at noon yesterday and forced two assistant cashiers and two customers into the vault. He took all the money in sight and fled to a stolen automobile containing two accomplices.

machines were installed in the new business location.

ALSO REPLACED was the horse-drawn cart, and in its place was supplanted a fleet of new automotive trucks, which serviced all Pickaway County.

The modern-day bakery has become such a necessity to housewives, it is required to bake a variety of breads and pastries to accommodate the many needs.

A general list includes various types of breads, Danish pastry, buns, rolls, coffee cake, doughnuts, cakes of all types, cookies and other delicacies along the pastry line.

Thursday, Friday Are Full Days As Park Program Nears Finale

Circleville youngsters attending the Kiwanis-sponsored Ted Lewis Park playground program put in a full day Thursday. On the schedule for the youngsters was a wiener roast, a swim party and 10 contests of skill.

Also on the list of activities was the playoff for the "Junior World Series" between the Giants and Tigers, which the Giants copied by swamping the Tigers 15-7. Winning pitcher was Joe Hill and Eddie Tomlinson was charged with the loss.

"Porgie" Johnson rapped out the longest safety of the contest, a homerun to rightfield.

There were 60 of the park youngsters on hand for the morning swim Thursday sponsored by Ray Goetting, and 45 turned out for the wiener roast at noon. Free pop was furnished at the roast.

The ten contests of skill were run off during the afternoon, with prizes donated by Circleville merchants given winners.

List of winners and runners-up in the various contests follow: Jim Binkley first in 8-11 year old accuracy softball throw, Jim Phillips second; Roy Huffer, first in the 12-15 year old softball throw, with a five-way tie for second spot; Jim Phillips first in 8-11 distance throw, followed by Ronald Bennington; Tom Phillips winner in the 12-15 distance throw, followed by Roger Bennington and Skippy Johnson, tied for second.

BOB WELLINGTON first in 8-11 speed on basepaths, Jim Phillips, second; Roger Bennington first in 12-15 speed on bases, followed by Tom Phillips; Jerry Rooney first in distance hitting in 12-15, followed by Bob Turner;

and Pat Anderson first in 8-11 distance hitting, Alberta Hill second.

Alberta Hill won the final park jacks tournament Thursday.

Ronald Bennington was acclaimed the year's "champ" in boys' checkers, followed by Roger Graham, and Lena Hill copied the final girls' "champ" title by defeating Gloria Leist.

Friday, the last day of the Summer playground program this year, was to have been scheduled so that the championship game between the Cowboys and Roundtowners of the Class AA league was to have been played in the morning, followed by bicycle races and a treasure hunt after lunch.

Crew Escapes In Crash Landing

BERLIN, Aug. 13—The crew of an American C-54 transport had a lucky escape today when their craft crashed in a landing at Tempelhof airfield and burst into flames.

The cargo-carrying airplane from Frankfurt was carrying in supplies to western sectors of Berlin as part of the allied airlift.

The landing crash was attributed to bad weather.

Blood Donors Being Sought

Blood donors for Michael Hettlinger of Circleville are being sought by his daughter, Mrs. Robert Cline.

Mrs. Cline said Friday her father was in University hospital, Columbus, awaiting surgery. Donors of any type blood should contact either the hospital or Mrs. Cline who can be reached at Phone 890L.

Death Verdict Hinges On Tests

WOOSTER, Aug. 13—Wayne County authorities today awaited results of medical tests in the death of Mrs. Birdie Gillette before deciding if charges are to be placed against Verlin E. Adkins, 26.

Adkins was returned to Wooster last night from Huntington, W. Va., from where he was extradited on a first-degree murder charge in connection with the nearby Rittman woman's death.

In Cleveland, Cuyahoga County Coroner Samuel R. Gerber said no definite findings resulted from the first tests made on the contents of the victim's stomach.

Mrs. Gillette's nude body was found on a bed in her apartment. A love note, signed by Adkins and found at her side, read that he killed her because "I loved her."

Rutted Street Ends Vacation

AKRON, Aug. 13—Akron's city councilmen cut into the middle of their five-week vacation today to hold a special meeting on the question of street paving.

John Head, vice president of the council, called the meeting to cope with the crisis created by unpaved Hammel street in the seventh ward.

According to Head, heavy bus traffic on the dirt street has caused dishes and other crockery to be shaken from householder's cupboards.

Columbus Solons Promise Scrap On Rate Hike

COLUMBUS, Aug. 13—The Columbus city council will ask for an injunction to stop the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. from raising its rates 4.4 per cent, if the company doesn't withdraw the proposal by Monday morning.

The rate boost is to take effect in Columbus and 66 other Ohio communities at midnight Monday.

The council said last night to ask for the injunction on the grounds that the utility failed to give proper notice of its proposed rate hike.

The city leaders also directed City Attorney Richard W. Gordon to demand "an itemized statement under oath" from the firm, "setting forth... the facts and figures justifying the proposed surcharge."

Councilman Robert T. Oestreicher stated:

"The corporation action smacks of bad faith... it appears... the company is jockeying for position so that it can cudgel the electric users into accepting terms of their own choosing."

"The utility baron has enjoyed stupendous profits, its earnings are entirely out of proportion to the rates that are justified for a public utility."
